FORREST COOPER, Editor

You now have the opportunity to express your opinions and ideas through Vox Pop. Address communications for Vox Pop to Forrest Cooper, 504 Buena Vista Drive, Redmond, Oregon. Please give your name and address when you write.

At the time we go to press we have received a few communications which the editor has read with great interest. Expecting to be called upon to answer many perplexing problems from the depths of profound knowledge, I find that answering the following was only the mildest form of exercise and barely opened the spigot on my fountain of wisdom:

Dear Mr. Cooper:

"I have just finished reading the May-June issue of The Oregon State Employee and I see where you are well qualified to answer all questions.

Will you please tell me where I can find some Eskimos here in Iceland. I have been here three summers, have visited most of the villages but to date have not had the opportunity to observe one. I did, however, in January of this year talk to some in Greenland but my knowledge of the Eskimo language is very limited and I did not find out during the conversation if any of his people lived here in Iceland.

Any information on the subject will be appreciated because in a few months it will be necessary for some of us to take our Icelandic citizenship papers if a boat does not show up to take us back to the United States. Should our application have to be made and if it is disapproved by the Icelandic Government for reasons best known to them, it will be necessary that we go to the hills and pitch our pup tent on the glaciers in which case the knowledge of Eskimo habits and customs will be of the utmost value.

Dear Tommy:

I'll have Uncle Sam send a boat and bring you home. That will be easier than learning the Eskimo language or sleeping on a glacier.

Dear Mr. Cooper:
