P. M. Stephenson, formerly bridge construction engineer, is in the South Pacific helping to cook medicine of the kind that will make the Japs wish they had not started it. If he were "Wall Eyed" he could see Polaris and the Southern Cross at the same time. Steve says native Hulu dancers are over-rated.

ABOARD A DESTROYER-ESCORT IN THE WESTERN PACIFIC—(Delayed)—Walter A. Van Orden, sonarman, second class, USNR, of Grand Ronde, Oregon, fought aboard this slender ship which took everything the Japs could throw at her during the early stages of the Ryukyus campaign and came up scarred but still punching.

Off Okinawa, she was narrowly missed by enemy shore fire too distant for her guns to attack. Speedy help from a
