

prise to Dutch, as it happened to be his number. The expression on Dutch's face indicated that he would much rather have been out in the crowd of hopeful people than up on the stage, but at this time Jack Collins came to the rescue. He put another heater up for drawing just like the one drawn by Dutch. This second heater went to J. Floyd Hayes, maintenance section foreman at Manning.

Then came the drawing for the oil burner given by Beall Pipe and Tank Corporation, won by Floyd R. Wy-more, bridge operator on Interstate bridge. The toastmaster given by J. N. and M. J. Conley, Contractors, was won by Herb King on Carl Peterson's survey party. Last of the prizes, but by no means the least, was the waffle iron given by Porter W. Yett and won by A. Lesowski, on Clay Cornett's survey crew.

The rest of the evening was up to each individual—dancing, boating, swimming, and even a few tried eating again.

The picnic was managed and supervised by Mr. Ed Reif, chairman of the entertainment committee, with the assistance of a very able staff, which he appointed.

Guests from Salem chapter were Mr. and Mrs. Webb Ross and Mr. Mervin Stephenson.

Three hundred and fifty people attended, including members and their guests.
