

feels he should have one person in each chapter he represents, he could make the appointment without any action of the board and he could pick the right man.

Mr. Chidsey agreed with the suggestion and stated that he already had followed that procedure.

Mr. Hall stated he found it difficult to get around and contact very many employers; that he was limited to one area in Eugene and that although he did take a few trips and talk to some of the employees, it would take up too much time to convince every member of the state employee group and get them to join the association. He felt that if Mr. Stewart could line up a group so the director could get an appointment to talk with the group, it might be done, but he felt the director could not neglect his job to run around the country.

Mr. Chidsey said that Eugene had one of the biggest groups of potential members of any town in the state outside of Portland and Salem. Mr. Kehrli told him that it would be easy if somebody would get in and do a little work. One of the duties of the district director is to organize and form new chapters. Contact two or three men at the university and get a date for a meeting. He added that if Mr. Hall could bring in the University of Oregon he could bring in the College of Eastern Oregon. He mentioned that Corvallis has a chapter at the college, but that Bob Glenn told him about 75 per cent of the potential members at Corvallis don't even know there is an organization.

Mr. Morelock asked if it would be possible over a considerable period of time to obtain lists of employees and then such lists be referred to the district directors for determination as to who should be contacted. He wanted reaction to that suggestion as a help.

Mr. Stewart stated that the Association has names and addresses of state employees as of September, 1947.

Miss Jaynes questioned the direct value of circularizing people through the mail. She said she believed that if
