

Crater Lake national park reports its winter sports activities are on a smaller scale than usual. The north and east entrance roads are closed for the winter, but all-year travel will continue over the west entrance highway from Rogue River valley and the south entrance from the east side of the mountains.

Ski clubs may bring their own portable tows but these must be removed at the end of the day. The community house at the rim will be open on Sundays as a shelter. No food or lodging accommodations will be available, restricting the park to day use entirely. Accommodations are available at Fort Klamath on the south and Union creek on the west, each about 20 miles from the park.

Visitors are urged to carry tire chains, a shovel, and a tow rope for emergency use. Park officials also announce no gasoline is available in the park during the winter.

A large parking area is available at the rim area for skiers as well as sightseers who would view Oregon's scenic wonder under its deep mantle of white.

Sky Trail on non-federal lands, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Presley, at the summit of the Siskiyou mountains south of Ashland is another of Oregon's more recently developed areas. A thick forest was cleared to create a ski run 150 feet wide and 2,200 feet long, declared ideal for all types of skiers. A rope tow and coffee cabin are available over weekends and holidays. A special ski and sled run for children has also been constructed.

The Sky Trail season usually begins Christmas day and continues until March. Night skiing with lights is available to groups. A large parking area on state highway property on U.S.
