The past week has been one of the most interesting and exciting in the history of the Association. The work of canvassing for the new Association building has gone on rapidly. Prospectuses were distributed among the students the first of the week; on Wednesday the matter was reviewed in its various aspects in Assembly, and on Thursday the excitement reached its climax, as the committees went about receiving the pledges from the students. The chief topic of conversation in the halls was the new building, as the pledges began to increase, the excitement increased proportionately. At five o'clock in the afternoon the results, so far as had been obtained, were announced, and it became evident that the building was not to remain simply a dream, but in time would become an accomplished reality.

The young women of the university, as well as the men, have given nobly. Their gifts averaged over thirteen dollars apiece, and this from students who must earn every cent they give. Such an experience as the Association has passed through during the last week makes one optimistic. It shows that the indifference to the religious life which is sometimes so lamented, is not deep-seated, but that all students are interested in some measure in the higher life, and in those things which tend to build up the grandest and most enduring structure—a noble character.

The subject studied in the Wednesday afternoon prayer meeting was, "Christ as a friend and Intercessor." Miss Gene Crawford presided, opening the subject with some very earnest appropriate remarks.

This Occurred to the Statesman

It occurs to the Statesman that the several colleges and universities of this state can kick up more of a muss, and keep it up longer and more bitterly, over a little thing than any other set of people we know of. Whether it be athletics or polemics they do not seem to be able to conduct their contests with strict honesty or with any confidence in the honor of one another. Isn't it about time to temper the quality of your criticism, gentlemen, and elevate the standard of your charity? The Statesman believes that would be the easiest way to insure a better standard of honorable intercourse. If you cannot do this, the people will cease to care about witnessing your trials of strength and endurance—physically or mentally.—Salem Statesman.

Y. M. C. A.

Many of the Y. M. C. A. members will remember Miss Angie Myers M. D., who visited the University a few days last year on her way to China where she was being sent as a medical missionary by the girls of Smith College. A recent number of the Smith College Monthly contains a very interesting letter from her to the girls of that College. She is now in Amoy China, in the hospital. She has been struggling the past months with the language and she tells some amusing experiences she has had in trying to converse with her patients. The few days she was with us, Miss Myres did much to awaken our interest in the subject of foreign missions and our ambition to be able to do what Smith College is doing, support our own representative on the field.

An Associated Press dispatch states that ten picked men from Berkeley will leave San Francisco May 4th to uphold the colors of California in Washington and Oregon. They will contest with the U. O. men on May 7th, and with the U. W. men on May 11th.
