

NEGATIVE TRIO IS DEFEATED

excluded on the basis of protection to American labor. He maintained that if we allow the Japanese to do only our menial work, that they will become a race of slaves and that we will have our southern slavery question to deal with once again. To prevent all this, Harris argued, there is open the solution of exclusion of the Japanese from the United States.

Thos. R. Townsend spoke next for Oregon. He admitted that there were evils connected with the present policy of the United States with regard to the Japanese and conceded that regulation of immigration was necessary; but maintained that no further legislation was necessary and that the Chinese exclusion law is wholly uncalled for; first because the nation of Japan has expressed a willingness to deal with the question and solve the problem at its source by preventing Japanese laborers from coming to the United States from Japan; second, there are already sufficient laws upon our statute books giving the president power to stop immigration to the United States when necessary. He showed a large amount of cheap labor was an actual necessity on the Pacific Coast and that our present laws allowed a limited immigration to meet this need. Since the Chinese law would exclude all Japanese, he argued that its extension would be unwise. What we want, he maintained, is a law which will make a limited immigration possible.

Thos. E. Latimer, Washington's veteran leader, who has worked in the employ of the Japanese exclusion league, on the question of Japanese exclusion, for two years, spoke next. He argued that Japan could not be trusted to take care of the question of keeping her laborers from the United States and that hence the Chinese laws should be extended to the Japs. He maintained that the American fleet was coming around the horn and that there was a possibility of war with Japan. Hence the Japanese should be excluded. Latimer was not especially strong on constructive argument and his real ability was not shown until his five minute closing rebuttal speech.

Clarence L. Whealdon closed the debate for Oregon. He summarized Oregon's case thus far advanced and contended that no further legislation is necessary. But even if it should be conceded that further legislation is necessary, the Chinese law is not the best means because it is unjust. He then described the law in detail showing that it was enacted contrary to the basic principles of American government in that it presumed a man entering the United States to be guilty until proven innocent when it should be the reverse. He showed that the right of habeas corpus was not granted to a Chinaman and that other injustices would make it an insult to Japan to extend such laws to apply to her citizens. Whealdon closed with a complete summary of the negative argument.

Thos. E. Latimer closed the debate for Washington and with a whirlwind finish was successful in landing the unanimous decision as above chronicled.

Track Tryout

Saturday afternoon at 3:30, Trainer "Bill" Hayward entered the greater the greater part of his track athletes in special events for the purpose of getting a comparative estimate of the various men. Very few of the regular events of a track meet were pulled off, so that places won are not permanent. The official tryout for the team which enters the Columbia Indoor meet will occur on the coming Saturday. In case of two men tying, the place will be given to the man who has trained the most consistently.

Following is the list of events and place winners of the field day last Saturday.

- 75 yd. dash—Moores, Kiltz, Moore.
 - 75 yd. dash (novice)—Moon, Swart, Loosely.
 - 660 yd. run—Dodson, Downs.
 - 300 yd. dash (novice)—Moore, Dean, Loosely.
 - 50 yd. hurdles—Moores, Kuykendall.
 - 1000 yd. run—Wood, Sivers, Platts.
 - 1000 yd. run (novice)—Riddell, Williams, Hoover.
 - Shot put—Zacharias, McIntyre, and Moulten.
 - 175 yd. dash—Moores, Moon, Reid.
 - Pole vault—Moullan, Roberts, Robinson.
 - Broad jump—Kuykendall, Bristow.
- No time was given out, but the heavy condition of the track prevented anything fast, although there was some keen competition for places. The work of Freshman Moon was particularly noticeable and several other first year men showed promise of future development.

A report of the address of Bishop Scadding at Assembly last Wednesday is not printed because our assembly editor failed to turn it in.

DIED

Mrs. Lizzie Luckey, wife of J. S. Luckey, at her home on Tenth and Pearl streets, Monday, March 23.

Mrs. Luckey was well known to the students of the University and to many she was a close personal friend. During the early years of the institution her home was the center of college social functions, and no such occasion was considered complete unless chaperoned by her. Many are the students who she has helped in their struggle for an education. Childless herself she became the mother and adviser of more than one young man and many are they who, with grateful memories of her beneficences, share with the bereaved husband his grief for one departed.

Resolutions

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom, has removed from among us Mrs. Luckey, the well-loved friend of the University, therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the students of the University, hereby express our sorrow and grief for the loss of one whose beautiful character won our profound admiration and respect, and whose generous nature will long be remembered; and be it

Resolved, that we extend to the bereaved family and friends, our deepest and heartfelt sympathy.

Committee

Only a Few Dollars Behind.

Manager E. Smith, of Oratory and Debate, will close his season with a deficit of only ten or fifteen dollars—the best record that has been made in this department for several years. Last year and the year before these departments were behind from $50 to $75 at the close of the season so that the work of Manager Smith is very gratifying. For a week before the contest Manager Smith worked hard and constantly and advertised his debate in a manner superior to any previous contest. His success was brought about by hard work and all due credit should be given him.
