

duties for which she would be well prepared if she had had a chance to study domestic science, but which may seem difficult to her if she does not understand the art.

The pioneer in this field in the University of Oregon is Miss Grace Parker, '07, who after having studied domestic science privately, is now matron of the boys' dormitory successfully filling the difficult position.

A NEW CUSTOM

Hereafter, the rally and celebration is to be an annual affair, occurring on June the first in commemoration of the triumph of the University and higher

A rally such as we had the other night will be a fitting celebration to mark the anniversary of the beginning of a greater Oregon.

GIRLS IN OFFICE.

That girls are capable of filling student body offices is shown by the efficiency of the work done during the past year by those holding positions. There are not many offices open to them, consequently there are a number of good candidates for these places. In our recent election, six girls were elected to student body offices.

Ruth Hansen, '10, was chosen editor-in-chief of the Oregon Monthly, to suc-

NEW COURSES ARE OFFERED

For Next Year by the Various Departments of the University of Oregon

Almost every department is offering new courses to be given next year, giving the new students a wider range of choice, and also offering more work for post-graduates.

Dr. Cloran has three new advanced courses in French and one in Spanish and Italian, beside one in "Teaching of French and Spanish." Dr. Schmidt is offering a similar course in German, beside three other advanced courses.

THE WEEKLY BANQUET

In appreciation of the consistent work of the year, the hard-working members of the Oregon Weekly staff were tendered a banquet at Otto's Friday night. Covers were laid for twelve and an elaborate and delicious menu was served. Those present were Nieta Harding, Winnie Cockerline, Miriam Van Waters, Harriet Lane, Hazel McNair, Agnes Beach, Arthur Van Dusen, T. R. Townsend, Merle Chessman, Walter Eaton, Earl Kilpatrick, Olin Arnsperger.

education over its enemies. The granting of the increased appropriation means opportunity for the growth and expansion that will fulfill the fondest hopes of its friends. Not only does it promise well for the University, but the whole state will receive direct benefit from having an efficient institution of higher education.

Better equipment, more buildings, and a larger teaching force will invite more students and it is safe to count on an enrollment of a thousand in a few years. Many who now go to universities in other states to get the benefit of better equipment will not need to do so any longer. Oregon will educate her own sons and daughters and will keep them loyal to herself.

ceed Miriam Van Waters, '08, and is well qualified to maintain the high standard of the paper, as she has shown by the good work she has done on the staff the past year. Her three feminine assistants have already proved their talent, Jennie Lilly, '10, by a series of bright essays in the Monthly, Neta Bartlett, '11, and Marian Stowe, '11, by excellent illustrations for different college publications. Nieta Harding, '09, the new secretary, who is the only girl on the executive committee, has been society editor of the Weekly. Harriet Lane '09, was elected for this position for which she is well qualified.

Rea Utter, a alumna of Salem High School, visited Friday with Harvey M. Slater at the Dormitory.

Prof. Sweetser is giving, for the benefit of the teacher, "School Hygiene."

Dr. Schafer is going to offer two new courses, at least, one on the Diplomatic History of Oregon, and one on Pacific Slope History.

There is to be a change in the geology department, lengthening out one semester course, and advancing Historical Geology.

The Department of Education will have a number of new courses primarily for the help of future teachers, while Philosophy and Ethics will have practically the same courses.

Other departments will add to their work also. Altogether, the courses offered are the most attractive the University has ever presented.
