STUDENTS ARE SCATTERED

All Along the Coast for the Summer Months—Many Seniors Plan To go East

Many students have completed their examinations and have gone to the work of the summer. More will leave this week and after the Commencement festivities the four hundred and thirty University students will be scattered about the state and elsewhere at their summer tasks. Many of the seniors are preparing to attend other colleges; some have their work planned in professional or business undertakings.

During the summer football muscle will be developing in the harvest field and tired brains will be rested by change of occupation. University students never lack opportunity to do lucrative work, for employers all over the state have found that the college student or graduate is a dependable and valuable assistant in any line of work. Some students will spend the summer in leisure, preparatory to hard work already decided upon for the autumn. Some of the plans for summer and fall work follow:

T. P. Holt, '07, has been awarded a five hundred dollar fellowship at the University of Utah.

Olen Arnspiger, '09, has a place in the government reclamation service in Klamath County.

Ormond R. Bean, '09, will act as recorder for a government surveying crew.

Ernest Bertsch, '08, will teach school in the fall.

Jessie H. Bond, '09, will remain in Eugene during the summer. His heaviest care will be the construction of another oration.

Lloyd Brooke, '08, will enter the Oregon Medical School at Portland.

N. R. Charman, '10, will work in Los Angeles during the summer.

Virgil Cooper, '09, will be found behind the counter of the First National Bank of Baker City.

Herbert F. Clarke, '09, and Wm.

Wood, '09, will lure the salmon from the depths of the Columbia. Sand Island will be the scene of their activity.

Ethan Collier, '09, will be deputy county surveyor of Lane County.

A. J. Elton, '08, will follow his calling as a mining engineer.

Oscar Furuset, C. B. Hamble, Gordon C. Moores and F. C. Ramp will attend the Oregon Law School.

Curtis Gardner, '08, has charge of a big irrigation project at Hood River.

Bert Prescott, '08, will study law while doing other work.

Ben Grout, '09, and Byron Goodall, '11, will canvass through several counties in Oregon and Washington.

Richard Hathaway, '08, will go east to take postgraduate work.

Harvey Houston, '08, will have charge of a mine belonging to his father in Idaho.

Harold Hunt, '09, and Earl Kilpatrick, '09, will be purveyors of farm machinery and vehicles.

Eberle Kuykendall, '08, will work in his father's office.

Dell McCarthy, '08, will run a combined harvester for his father over the rolling wheat fields of Umatilla County.

Walter McIntyre, '09, will work at cyaniding in a mine in northern California.

Harvard C. Moore will work in Portland this summer and be assistant-instructor in biology next year.

Dean Goodman, '10, will survey in Southern Oregon.

Wm. B. Neal, '08, will go east to attend the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania.

E. D. Paine, '08, is going to San Francisco for part of the summer.

John Penland, '08, will have charge of a surveying crew.

Louis Pinkham, '10, will go home to Spokane.

Paul W. Reid, '09, and Francis Walsh, '11, are working for the government at Yellowstone Park.

C. R. Zacharias, '08, will work in a grain elevator at Modesta, Calif.
