OREGON OVERCOMES O. A. C. AND M. A. A. C.

Both Games are Won by Forbe's Splendid Aggregation of Players to the Astonishment of Football Critics

Two Timely Place Kicks by Captain Fred C. Moullen Win Victory for the Varsity Over the Former Champions of the Pacific Coast

Ten thousand people saw it done. Fred Moullen and his team mates did it. The score was 8 to 0, made by two place kicks in the first of two gruelling thirty-five minute halves. On the heavy, wet sawdust of Multnomah Field, whereon Oregon has learned through defeat to conquer, the lemon yellow banner was, on November 21st, raised above the orange after two years of unsuccessful striving. The unexpected happened, as it often does. That is, the Portland crowd did not expect Oregon to win, the Varsity, twice defeated this year, scarcely dared hope for victory, and defeat had not even entered the dreams of the O. A. C. students.

Perhaps the great Forbes, who had been working all year to win this one game, in sublime disregard of other considerations; perhaps the wizard Norcross, who saw with despair the overconfidence of his men—had a premonition of the outcome. But to that great crowd, and to the students of both institutions, the result was a surprise. The surprise came not when the score was made, but from the moment of the first line-up. It was at once evident that the Aggies had met their superiors. As one staunch Oregon supporter, a day laborer on the University campus, expressed it:

"I went down to cheer the boys, feeling sure they'd get beat, but when I saw them come on the field, I knew they'd win. They looked bigger than ever before, and stronger, and I knew they'd win."

He voiced the feeling of the multitude. The clear faces, the quick movements, the self possession of the University men showed that theirs was the perfect condition, which alone can win a seventy-minute game. O. A. C. rooters, with their eyes upon their own team, did not see this, but when in the first scrimmage the Pacific Coast Champions were forced to kick, the hopes of the Corvallis people sank and they began a wild chanting plea to their team to win against all odds. But the seal of the day's page in the book of Fate had been broken and they could read there in in-

Clubmen go Down to Defeat on Thanksgiving Before the Punting of Clarke, the Agility of Means and the Skill of Moullen

Oregon won its third victory over M. A. A. C. on Thanksgiving day. The field was in better condition for the fast game in which the Varsity placed its trust. The heavier club men often penetrated the Oregon line for yardage, but Clarke would boot out of danger and their progress would be retarded. Clarke was easily the star of the game. His generalship in calling signals was excellent and to his Fabian tactics of allowing the club men to tire themselves in the first half may be attributed victory. Both scores were made in the second half, one by Means, who fell on the ball behind the club goal, and one by Moullen who made a pretty place kick.

The day was cold, bad for spectators, but good for football. The crowd is estimated at 4000.

Stott, for the club, ran in punts as cleverly as did Latourette for Oregon on Saturday.

Dow Walker proved effective on tackle through tackle. The names of Means, Main, Moullen, Clarke, Dodson and Pinkham were continually in the mouths of Oregon rooters.

Story of the Game

Moullen kicked to Slaker who was downed by Michael. Rader kicked, Smithson recovering the ball. Rader again kicked, Michael protecting Latourette in running back the punt, was hurt and replaced by Dodson. A forward pass went to Multnomah, who made yardage once, and failing to do so again tried a place kick which missed narrowly. Clark kicked to the center of the field and Moullen and Kiltz downed the runner. Dow, Walker and Slaker made yardage for M. A. A. C. An onside kick went to Latourette. Clark after a neat fake punt, kicked to Pilkington, who made yardage for Multnomah. Again Oregon held firm, and Stott tried unsuccessfully another place kick.

Multnomah no longer tried goals from the field but tried desperately for a touchdown, which they could not get, owing to Clarke's long high punts. This made the game a punting contest, with the advantage with Clarke.
