THAT DRAMA CRAZE!
By Oliver B. Huston.

(Note: The formation of a dramatic club composed of more than 100 students, with rehearsals already in full swing for one production, and the assignment of characters for the senior play, rehearsals ditto, have set in motion a burst of dramatic enthusiasm that has fairly carried the university off its feet. This state of affairs has inspired Mr. Huston to write the following poem:)

"There is vaudeville on the campus, Comedy in every class,
And tragedies out on the diamond—Strange things have come to pass!
Stunts are done on all occasions, Daring rescues are the go,
For the rearing, tearing, drama craze has struck us at U. O.

"Jessie cries, 'I have the papers!'
'Beauty' shrieks, 'Give me the ch-i-e-ld!'"

(It really sounds as if they all Had gone almost, if not quite, wild!) Edwin Booth would feel most envious,

'Tis better for him not to know That a rearing, tearing drama craze has struck us at U. O..

Jennie plays the Quaker maiden And marries soon that care free chap Cecil, who—the hardened bachelor—Hates to fall into the trap; Now and then a shag-haired villian Fills us with despair and woe, Since this rearing, tearing drama craze, has struck us at U. O.

"Bill, the burglar, counts his money, Pinching every shekel hard, Grumbles, 'Fudge, I'd got just twice the swag
If I hadn't had a pard.'

Oh! such strange sights and funny sounds
As their rehearsals show
Since this rearing, tearing drama
craze has struck us at U. O.

Frances is the leading lady, Herb aspires the hero's part, — While throngs and scads of other Thespians,

Are only waiting for a start;
Everything is quite unsteady,
The other sports will have to go Now this rearing, tearing drama craze, has struck us at U. O.

"Wish they'd call the Referendum Or sick the Grangers at 'em hard!
We poor common folk have no protection

Even in our own back yard;
For these budding, blooming actors Won't give a fellow any show (of escaping)
Since their rearing, tearing drama craze has struck us at U. O.

"WHO'S WHO"

much alive young man. But we will do the best we can.

Like every other great man, Goodman rejoices in a middle name. (Yes, Gentle Reader, we know all about George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Jefferson Davis, Theodore Roosevelt, and Victor Voigt, but we are referring now to those really great men like James J. Jeffries, John L. Sullivan, Thomas R. Townsend, Arthur Van Dusen and Dudley Clarke.) And it is a mighty fitting that his middle name should be Trueman. Dean Trueman Goodman!
What a deep, sonorous, confidence inspiring sound it has! Its the sort of a name to which you would entrust your life or pocket book after hearing it only one time. It is now a generally conceded fact in financial circles that if President Roosevelt at the beginning of the great panic in Wall street a year or so ago, had sent out a corps of 300 men with megaphones to shout that name at every Wall street business center, there could have been no panic.

Goodman is a born manager. He takes to managing as most young fellows take to talking. Oldtimers at Independence, Ore., where he was born 21 years ago, still show with pride the spot where Goodman made his debut as a manager by peddling papers when he was only 8 years old.
He hadn't worked for two weeks before he executed a manouever that squeezed out his two opponents, gave him absolute control of the paper market, and won for him the managership of the news company that was immediately organized. Soon after this his parents moved to Pendleton and spoiled a promising business future.

In the Pendleton high school Goodman made a managerial record by managing every possible student enterprise at one and the same time.
He was manager of baseball, football, basketball, track, debate and the monthly paper, besides singing in the glee club and managing it. When he graduated the directors asked him to stay and manage the school for them, but Goodman had the Oregon fever in his blood and nothing was doing.

In his freshman year, Goodman distinguished himself by being elected manager of the freshman track team. And he has been managing something ever since. At present Goodman is manager of the Weekly, the '09 football team, and the junior week-end committe, president of the inter-fraternity baseball league in the Doughnut cup race, and junior usher. Which is going decidedly some! But as aforesaid, Goodman is a born manager. He demonstrated this when he put the Oregon Weekly this year for the first time in its history, on what could be called a real paying basis; under his management the paper has progressed so much that it will be made a semi-weekly before the end of the semes-tr.

Goodman's greatest ambition is to turn out a championship football team next year; and his three greatest aversions are woman suffrage, O.
A. C., and the word "pigging." His greatest hero is King Henry VIII.— "because he was one of the finest managers in history—he managed his own wives," Goodman has explained to a Doughnut reporter.

After good old King Hal, Goodman is a staunch admirer of John D.
Rockefeller, football and junior class in the order named. He says that football is the greatest college game, The Doughnut the greatest American newspaper, and pop-corn the coming University food.

Yes, Goodman's a born manager.
And with Dud Clarke as captain, Forbes as Coach, Bill Hayward as trainer, Goodman as manager, and no end of new and veteran material, Oregon will surely have a championship team next fall.

THREE COURTS FOR THE CO-EDS.

Every co-ed at Oregon will have a chance to play tennis if Miss Frances Oberteuffer, manager of the recently organized girls' tennis club, is successful in a request she made of the regents' committee before it left for Portland Saturday. Miss Oberteuf-fer asked for an appropriation of $86 for building three courts on the campus between Villard Hall and the duck pond. She will be informed of the regents' decision soon.

One of the proposed courts, if the appropriation is granted, will be for the exclusive use of the girls. Young men, if they receive invitations to play from one of the co-ed members of the club, can join in the sport on the other two. Thirty-one girls have already joined the club. They are:

Gladys MacKnezie, Edith Prescott, Ruth Duniway, Jean Allison, Edith Woodcock, Ione Lambert, Lindley Welch, Alice Larsen, Jessie Bibee, Sue Hayes, S. F. Oberteuffer, Isoline Shaver, Lillah Clarke, Mildred Bagley, Emma Waterman, Pansy Shaver, Helen Parkhurst, Birdie Wise, Elizabeth Baer, Hazel Humphrey, Marion Stowe, Helena Hughes, Eleanor Treibey, Hazel Mc-Kown, Alma Payton, Jessie Hurley, Blanche Huston, Ruth Balderee, Frances Cooper, Mabel Cooper and Hazel Bradley.
