

Editorial.

The man in the tower reports that some small boys and some that are not small visit the apple orchard without permission. The apples and other fruit will be served on the tables to pupils and those who persist in helping themselves may get what the good old farmer terms a paddling.

Miss Estelle Reel National Superintendent of Indian Schools spent two weeks at Chemawa inspecting the plant. Her visit was very helpful to every employee as she mingled freely among them giving good advice and many practical suggestions. We consider Miss Reel a very competent inspector although she is a woman. She is not small in any sense of the word. When she sees little things that do not meet with her approval and can be properly criticised, she, in a kind firm way points out the defects and suggests a remedy—rightly believing she is thus doing the service the greatest possible good and greatly assisting employes to improve their departments and advance the interests of their school.

To a young man who had in himself the magnificent possibilities of life, it is not best that he be commanded; he should be a commander. One must not continue to be employed, he must be the employer. You must be promoted from the ranks to a command. There is something, young man which you can command, go and find it, and command it.

The privilege of being a man is a great one and the privilege of growing up to be an independent man in middle life is greater. These ends are only accomplished by hard struggle and toil day by day. Success is only achieved by hard labor. Let not poverty be an obstacle in our way. Poverty is uncomfortable, but nine times out of ten the best things that can happen to a young man is to be tossed over-board, and to be compelled to sink. "For a smooth sea never made a skillful mariner."

Up, young men seize your opportunities while in school, they are sands of precious gold. Now is the harvest time. Make hay while the sun shines. Gather the roses while they bloom.

Table Etiquette

Do not leave your spoon in your teacup. Crack the top off your egg instead of peeling it.

If you have bacon or fish, have a separate plate for your bread or toasts and butter, but not when only having boiled eggs, which require very careful eating, by the bye, as nothing looks so nasty as yolk of egg spilled all over the plate and egg cup.

Do not sip your tea or coffee with a spoon.

Do not drain the cup.

For fish do not use a dessert knife instead of the fish knife. If there be no fish knife, use a small crust of your bread, but leave that piece of crust on your plate. Do not eat it afterward, as so many people do.

Do not be dainty and fringe your plate with bits of meat. Eat what you can and put any skin or bone on the edge of your plate in one little heap, which move down from the edge when you have finished.

Do not crumble up your table napkin. If you are only a guest for the day, do not fold it up, but if you are staying on and in a quite household fold it up. If you are staying in a big house where everything is done "en grand prince," do not fold it up. Just place it on the table when you leave, as in rich establishments there are clean table napkins every day.

After eating it is well before you drink to wipe your lips, otherwise you leave a smeary mark on the glass.

Do not gulp liquids and bolt food.

Do not masticate or swallow audibly.

Do not pile your plate with food or grasp your knife fork or spoon as if it were a weapon of warfare.

Do not crumble the bread by your side or drain your glass to the last drop.

On the other hand, do not be affected and eat as if an appetite were a crime, drink as if you were a dicky bird, and hold your knife, fork and spoon as if they were red-hot needles.

—[The Daily Journal.