The runaway boy is a great loss. —No.

We read that a terrible blizzard is raging in Pennsylvania and North Eastern States.
It is to be hoped that the Old-man-on-the-hand-and all his nose and toes fray.If you have anything to do, even if it is a difficult task, you will find it half done before it is well begun. Don't procrastinate, for if you have anything to do, get in and do it.The wisdom and calmness of life come from persistently closing our eyes to its gratements. There is no other life so good as that which, through our own grasp of visible things, has lost all excitement, laid upon its own realities. I find that the happiest phase of infinite greatness, the good itself cannot exist, unfolded within the perfect hour, the life itself becomes here. —[R.]Lessons on Public Matters are being given in some of our most popular Educational Journals. These lessons are notconfined to school-room etiquette, but include manners, etc. The teacher's tuition for Feb. has an article in it on this subject, which recommends having a dinner party in the school room and the pupils having the experience required in leading invitations, receiving the guests and of serving the dinner.France has taken a long step in the matter of industrial education. Her government is considering plans for the establishment, in the United States, of a French school which will be devoted to the study of American industrial methods. The projectors, who are some of the most influential business and professional men of the European continent, say that it would be impossible for the coming generation of young Frenchmen to compete with the trend of industrialism unless American methods, which are revolutionizing the world, are speedily adopted, and they can see no better way for the accomplishment of this purpose than by digging to the very roots of our methods. M. Dejeane, the French minister, says that the new institute will be handsomely endowed by the government. —[E.]Pat was a business lover and Bridget was not—but not his only.Bridget, Pat began, in a timid manner, did ye ever think of matrimony?Sure, now, the subject had never entered my thoughts, replied Bridget.It's an old game, said Pat, turning away.
Wasn't mine, Pat asked Bridget, wifely Ye've set me a thinking'.Breathless Would be Passenger: station-master, when does the ball-past five train leave?

Station-master: 1:22.

Passenger: Well, the new clock is set in twenty-seven minutes past, the new clock is twenty-five minutes past, and your clock is thirty-two minutes past.
Now, in the name of goodness, what clock am I to go by?Station-master: You can go by any clock you like, but the train's gone.
