The bids for sewer and drainage will be opened by the Honorable Commissioner in his office at Washington on Nov. 12, at 2 P. M. When this is completed the last of Lake Labish will have disappeared and it will be only a lake in name, and in its place Chemawa will have one of the finest GARDEN SPOTS IN THE WORLD.

Do you want to live your time? Then don't come to Chemawa. Are you careless and lazy? Then don't come to Chemawa, but take a brace up and try to live a better life without Governmental support. The government has no money to waste on the idle, careless and lazy crowd.

The Commissioner's letter which is published on third page of this issue is another step forward in the march of civilization and education of the Red Man and will receive universal commendation and appreciation.

Now give us a compulsory education law and some method of getting full blood Indian pupils from reservation schools and we will advance the more rapidly.

We do not need a cast-iron compulsory law, but we do need some way to get hold of a certain class of bright full-blood Indian pupils who enter our reservation schools, stay there three or four years and then at the age of 16 drop out of school and go back to old ways. Give us a bill on these pupils and we will soon be ready for the next step.

Chemawa helped Peter.

Peter Williams who learned the carpenter's trade at Chemawa writes an encouraging letter from Cathlamet, Wash., where he has been working for several months.
He says: "We are well and happy as ever.
I am getting $2.50 per day and my board and my wife's also."

The AMERICAN congratulates Peter on his success and hopes he is putting at least one half of his earnings in the bank, for future use.

Chemawa is proud of having helped scores of young Indian men and women to learn and master good trades who are now employed at the same wages that are paid to whites for similar work.

The Chemawa School is better prepared to-day than ever before, with its new brick Industrial Buildings and their complete apparatus for teaching trades to its students.
