Education in Alaska.

The Times Special Service.

Washington, D. C., Friday, Oct. 24,

—Under the head of "Education in Alaska," Commissioner of Education W. T. Harris, in his annual report for the fiscal year 1902, says that the bureau has maintained twenty-seven public schools in the territory, outside the incorporated towns, during the past year, with thirty-three teachers and an enrollment of 1 747 pupils. The fund for the maintenance of these schools is derived from the license moneys collected outside of the cities, one-half going to the school fund. The amount thus applied last year was $35,802.51.

The town of Nome received for school purposes $42,738.26, which was larger than necessary by $7,962, that amount having been turned back into the city treasury and used for other municipal purpose. The commission complains that the school boards at Nome, Juneau and Ketchikan, all incorporated, have refused to receive native children of Indian or Eskimo descent into existing schools or to open schools for them. He, however, suggests no remedy for what he evidently regards as an evil.

On the subject of reindeer in Alaska, the commissioner says that owing to being obliged by the Russian government to pay coin for reindeer in that empire, it was only possible to secure thirty head. Heretofore the natives in Northern Siberia have
