

and told her if she needed any thing else to let them know. Now if they can only tell her how to furnish Mrs. Kober's meals on eating she will be happy.

Mr. Hill with the assistance of Mr. Godwin and a force of wagonmakers and carpenters have about completed our fine new hall house, which is 100 x 30. The main part of the house is full to overflowing, and provisions are being delivered by the professor and his forces.

On Friday evening the employees enjoyed a regular old fashioned hallowe'en party. The Auditorium was beautifully arranged, the decoration of autumn leaves being unusually effective. After enjoying lots of fun and partaking of the regular hallowe'en refreshments, all left at peace with themselves and the world.

We are glad to know that William Budgett is getting along so well. He is employed in one of the best tailor shops in Portland, and is receiving a salary of $15.00 per week. Chemawa has many instances of this, which speaks for itself as to the opportunities to be attained in her industrial departments.

The Chemawa second football team defeated The Salem second team last Saturday by the score of 6 to 0, on the latter's grounds; whereas first team got defeated by the score of 11 to 0, at Portland. The first team were much lighter in weight than their opponents and did not get beaten so badly as was anticipated. Quite a number of the employees went down and saw the game.

The Bellows Literary Society met in school room No. 5, Thursday evening Nov. 5, 1902, and reorganized for the ensuing school year. The membership this society will amount to fifteen this year, and if all respond to their parts on the programme, which they no doubt will, there is no reason for it not being the leader. The following officers were elected:

Eugene Goffs, Pres.; Omer Reynolds, Vice-Pres.; John Stacy, Secretary; Mera Polak Corresponding Secretary; Alex Young, Treasurer; Wm. Argusie, Sergeant-at-arms; and Walter Dyke, Asst. Sergeant-at-arms.

We were favored on Monday morning with an excellent chapel talk by the Honorable R. J. Hendricks, Editor of the Salem Statesman. Mr. Hendricks urged us to be obedient, to work, and to be thankful. On appropriate and eloquent terms, he explained how all nature must obey laws, how everything and every body must work and the beauty and peace we obtain from the observance of their laws. He urged us to be thankful for all the blessings we enjoy at our beautiful school and for all that the government has given to us to make us good men and women and good citizens of the greatest country on earth. We hope to hear more of Mr. Hendricks' good earnest words during the winter.

THE AMERICAN feels proud in pointing to one of Chemawa's successful young men, Willie Ingram, who learned his trade at this school. Willie secured a position in one of the bakeries of Salem and by diligent and close attention to work he worked his way up to the position of chief baker. When last interviewed Willie was receiving $15.00 per week, and probably by this time he is receiving $20.00. This young man learned his trade at Chemawa and stuck right to it until he mastered it, and now he is receiving his reward for his persistent earnestness in all that he undertook. Stay with it Willie.

The Tongue.

- "The tongueless tongue, so small and weak,
Can crush and kill," declared the monk.
- "The tongue destroys a greater hoard,"
The Turk asserts, "than does the sword."
- The Persian proverb wisely saith,
"A lengthy tongue—an early death."
- Or sometimes takes this form instead:
"Don't let your tongue out of your head."
- "The tongue can speak a word whose speed,"
Lays the Chinese, "surpassing the wind."
- While Arab sage hath thus declared:
"The tongue's great storehouse is the heart."
- From Hebrew with the meaning sprung,
"Though feet should slip, never let the tongue."
- The sacred writer counts the whole,
"Who keeps his tongue both keep his soul."
