TONGUE AT CHEMAWA.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
INDIAN TRAINING SCHOOL—
STOCK STRAITS.

(Evening Telegram Correspondent.)

Salem, Nov. 11.—Congressman Thomas H. Tongue spent yesterday at Chemawa, looking over the Indian Training School, with its numerous industrial and literary departments, its new buildings, fine equipment, etc. He also delivered an address to the students and officers of the institution, urging the young people to earnest, business individual effort. He commended the management upon the liberal support given by the General Government and was proud of the part he had played in obtaining such support, especially as there are so many evidences of the good results which have been wrought through the wise, intelligent conduct of the officials of the school. Mr. Tongue will return to Washington fully prepared to defend the institution and its right to liberal Government treatment.

Mr. Tongue was driven to Salem by train during the afternoon and in the evening delivered an able and eloquent address before the students of Willamette University and their guests of the city generally. His talk related to the "Pace of Success," in which he insisted upon the necessity for individual effort and enterprise, which form the passport to success in a free country like America. He stated that social success, money, political influence, etc., would not be rolled down to success, but the individual must carve within himself the attributes and powers necessary to carve it out for himself. Mr. Tongue is always an interesting, pleasing talker, and he was at his best last night giving his subject an honest and instructive treatment.

An old friend.

Capt. Edward P. Mahony of Boston, Ohio, does not forget the Chemawa boys and girls, and his visit four years ago, when as a Cuban officer he addressed the school in behalf of the poor suffering Cubans who were fighting for liberty. He does not forget how the Chemawa pupils raised $25.00, buying bullets and food for the Spanish, and hoped one of them would go down to that old Hatchee Gap, where Capt. Mahony, with an American war-buffalo, before the war broke out. Here lived in the army of General and Uncle Sam a brave American soldier boy. When wounded he was given a special allowance to visit the U. S. and help the Cuban Cause financially by working and schooling at L. E. W. and at the time he visited Chemawa.

Since the war he has been a United States Army officer and has on different occasions and important government positions in New England. In a personal letter to the Paper he says, "I cherish a few words that perhaps might be useful to some thoughtful boy in the school," as follows:

The boy who wants to do things must not only be afraid of hard things but he must not be afraid of things that happen. And the only way that will make things happen is thought. The product of thought is risk and the market value of a good thing is its fortune. Honest work is worth a good salary, but honest work "done" good ideas worth an interest in the business.
