The Exclaimers.

The Exclaimers Literary Society rendered a very fine program last Thursday night. Among the features of the production were some very timely and appropriate remarks by Pres. Hinks in his address to the society. Absent was very cogent reasons why married life was preferable to single life were set forth by various members of the society. The affirmative maintaining that the true ideal of every noble young man was that of a happy home, graced by a sunny disposition wife and brightened by the prattle of children. However, the advocates of married life were sufficiently practical to qualify these statements by saying that every young man should have at least $500.00 in money together with a team and other means for farming and in addition as much more as possible, especially a good piece of land before engaging in the matrimonial field. The program was a pretty looking in itself and should be brought up in that feature.

The interest taken in the literary work by the editors of the "Chemawa American" is commendable. It is the featured item weekly in the Orie.—[Haker City High School Nigger.]
