

Exchanges.

The Athletic Association of Pullman is making a new colored track.

The Red Man and Helper, in its issue of Feb. 27, gave a very interesting account of the exercises held during commencement week at the Carlisle Industrial school.

Volume 7, Number 1, of The Tumbucout comes to our desk this week in its usual happy mood. The Tumbucout is one of our brightest exchanges, is always full of good things and has an excellent make-up.

The Wood Carrier, of the Dakota Mission, is still, Neb., passed its thirty-second anniversary last June. The Carrier is a bright, up-to-date paper, and a welcome visitor to our exchange desk. May it have many more birthdays.

Carlisle is preparing a track team to enter in the four mile championship race at Philadelphia during the big meet. Harvard, Yale, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and other large institutions will also enter. We expect to have good reports from the Carlisle boys.

The News published the Constitution of the Student Association of the Eugene High School in its March issue. The object of this association is repression of all student enterprises. The constitution provides ways and means for the election of officers and governing the different social and business affairs of the student body.

An Indian Hero.

J. Hobson and Funtson are not the only heroes. Eddie Macdonald, an eight-year old well-known son of the Golden West, may never become a Brigadier General, but on Friday last he performed a feat of valor worthy of an epic by Tennyson or Austin. The little son of J. L. Macfarlan was playing in the ice, watching the sleds and Eddie catchment thoughts a hole in the ice, when suddenly he slipped from the edge into the swirling waters of the river. It was at the place where Mr. Thompson was drowned last summer and now for the good things of nature would keep death in its depths. The young Indian, however did not debate the question, feeling his young companion disappear into the foaming depths, he promptly followed and, and shortly reappeared and placed his companion on terra firma. Although wet as an overboarded dishpan, Macdonald's head was as cool as his ice destroyed today, and he calmly continued floating till time to go home.—[Wentworth Republican]

A Small Blaze.

My Children had an accident last Wednesday on the farm to the west of the school. By some means or other the fuel box caught fire, during the night hour, from the load which he was burning, and burned out of the box before it burned out. It was impossible to get near the box because it contained a quantity of dynamite, which was liable to cause havoc. Fortunately the dynamite burned without exploding so that no damage was done except to the loss of a little dynamite and the fuel box.

Mrs. Williams, wife of Cheyenne's well known sportsman and coach of the Blue School, and left last week for her own location.

Mr. James J. Heath, of South Bend, Washington, has been appointed chief Printer and has reported for duty, also St. Louis J. Herald, who was temporarily employed.

Howards, our engineer apprentice, has acquired considerable information as to the plumb line and gas flow test, during the installation of the sulphur plant which the new connection is being made with the water system.

The Washington legislature, which adjourned last week, passed a law limiting children between the age of sixteen and seven years to attend school at least one month in a year. A similar law governing the desecration of children has been in effect several years.