

Harry Shale, a Quinault Indian, has made a catch of a sea otter, which is very unique, says the Telegram. Shale is considered one of the most successful hunters on the reservation. Taking a companion in a canoe, he started out through the surf, Sunday morning, carrying only a 30 40 Winchester. After they passed Grauville Rocks his keen, black eyes discovered a moving spot on the surf of the sea, which experience told him was an otter. He took careful aim when within good distance, fired one shot and soon pulled the game into the boat. It was a fine specimen of the silver-tipped otter, and the skin is said to be worth $500.

Sunday's San Francisco Examiner contained a lengthy account of Wesley Davis' marriage to Marcella Oginez, a pretty, refined, educated, full-blooded Pueblo Indian girl, and a former pupil of the Phoenix Indian school, which recently took place in an Indian village in New Mexico. Mr. Davis is a graduate of Cornell University, a member of an aristocratic New York family, an intimate friend of the Vanderbilts and a favorite in New York's Four Hundred. It is said that the young man's parents are prostrated over the affair. The Examiner did not state how the young Mrs. Davis' parents treated the affair. It is to be hoped, however, that they will forgive their erring daughter and reconcile themselves to the situation.

Miss Matilda Kruger and Miss Delia Randall of, Hoopa Valley school, were visitors at Chemawa on Wednesday. Miss Kruger graduated from Chemawa five years ago and is now seamstress at the Hoopa Valley School. Her old friends at Chemawa, were very glad to greet Miss Kruger and all heartily congratulated her upon the success she has met with in her work at Hoopa Valley. Miss Randall was educated at Carlisle, studied nursing there and then graduated from the New Haven School for nurses. She has been nurse at Hoopa Valley, but has been transferred to Carlisle Reservation school. Both of these clever young Indian women are an honor to their race and the schools that have educated them.
