

of man in the team—there seemed to be so many of him. Davis, as captain, showed good generalship besides making some touchdowns. All the team played well both on the offensive and defensive as McMinnville were unable at any stage of the game to make their yardage. Once they got the ball within one yard of Chemawa's goal line but were unable to advance the pigskin the necessary 36 inches. The first half was spoiled by unnecessary wrangling; the last half was better and both teams played good ball. The most sensational play of the game was made in the last kick off by McMinnville, with just 30 seconds to play they kicked to Schilt who advanced five yards, then returned the kick; McMinnville tried to catch but missed and Moon picked up the ball and carried it over the line for a touchdown, ending the game.

The home team played fair ball but lacked team work. With proper coaching and drill they will be heard from later on.

STRIKES OUT FOR HIMSELF.

Alpheus Dodge, an old Chemawa boy who learned the harness-making trade here, and has successfully filled the position of harness-maker for several years at Ft. Belknap school, Mont., writes to Supt. Potter that he has cut loose from Uncle Sam and is running a harness shop of his own at Harlem, Mont. He has a $3000 stock on hand and is working up a good business. Nothing could please us more. We would earnestly advise every young man, Indian or white, to get into business for himself as soon as possible and let the other fellow work for a salary. There has been too great a tendency to train Indian students with the idea that a government position is the great goal to which they should aspire.

It would be much better for any young man to launch out for himself in some good business, such as farming, dairying, stock-raising, blacksmithing, carpentering, or harness making rather than hang on Uncle Sam's coat-tails, filling some position where the salary is not great and he will be likely to spend all he earns.

The Chemawa American feels incapable of extending adequate congratulations to its old friend, Col. Robert M. Pringle, Supervisor of Engineering, on his recent marriage to one of the most beautiful and accomplished young ladies in Colorado. While feeling somewhat slighted at not being invited to witness the grand event, yet we will easily forgive, and sincerely wish the Colonel and his happy bride a long life of perpetual joy and sunshine.
