

played the best game. It was he who was in the thick of every scrimmage, fiercely tackling the Berkeley runners. He played like a battering ram on the offensive and on the defensive which handled the punt Overall placed down the field with splendid ability. Several times he caught the ball and kicked it back on the run almost as great a distance as it came. His work was well supplemented by the giant Schilt, who played left tackle. Schilt played in the Carlisle Indian team in 1899 and is a well rounded player. Captain Davis was another of the redskin players who did good work. He had scarcely gotten into the game, however, before he was compelled to retire on account of an injured leg. Moon, the quarterback played a gritty game, but his teammates were too light to stand against Berkeley men. Their line was weak and could not make a hole through the solid wall presented by the blue and gold."

OLD MAID'S CONVENTION.

The "Old Maid's convention," the little burlesque rendered by the pupils of the school in the chapel last Tuesday evening, was a great success, and much enjoyed by all in attendance. Many of the girls not only showed that they had received careful training, but that they possessed no small amount of natural talent. We regret that we were unable to secure the caste in time for publication. Louise Sullivan as Josephine Jane Green, president of the Convention, filled her office to perfection; while Lulu Beach, as Priscilla Abigail Hodge, the secretary, and Emma Williams as Calamity Jane Higgins, the treasurer, were not lacking in their official capacity. Mary J. Smith, as Malinda Bluegrass, Maggie Downie, Rachel Rebecca Sharp, Blanche Davis, Tiny Short; Violet Dupius, Matilda Spriggins, and Ethel Parrish as Violet Ann Ruggles, furnished no small amount of comedy. In fact every girl acted her part well and kept their audience in an uproar. Space alone forbids special mentioning of each. We doubt very much if these charming "old maids" have as much trouble in securing husbands in the future as they had Tuesday evening.

Why did the girls sew carpet rags so fast, Thursday evening? Because they were favored with sweet music from the phonograph.

A merry group of little folks enjoyed themselves at the employes building last evening, the occasion being Tommy Potter's birthday. Tommy was just eight years old, as eight flaming little candles indicated on a delicious birthday cake.
