

PUPILS' ITEMS

Claudia Spink will be out to Chemawa the end of the month.—A. C.

Lizzie Martin returned to school again and her friends are glad to see her.—J. S.

Ellen Kinley is now working in the sewing room. She likes her work very well.—N. J.

We pupils of the third grade wish Miss Miller success in growing sweet potatoes.—W. P.

The lake is frozen at Chemawa—come on boys and play on the ice and have a good time.—E. D.

The boys have a great deal of fun skating on the ice on the further end of the lake below the new barns.

Miss Mary Pablo made herself a very pretty pin and needle cushion. She is very proud of it.—E. C.

The dress makers are starting on the second company's gray uniforms of the small girls' home.—K. H.

We notice some of the large girls running around without wraps during this cold weather show better sense.

Mr. Goudge gave the pupils and employes an interesting sermon Sunday evening in the school chapel.—T. S.

Mr. Chas. Smith who has been visiting his brother Mr. James Smith has returned to his home in California.—L. M.

Pearlie Clark is working on the dairy detail and he likes his work very well. Mr. Cooper says he is a good worker.—T. W.

Thomas Williams works in the blacksmith shop and he likes his work. He said that's the best place he ever worked in.—P. C.

Father Datin's sermon on Sunday morning was very interesting, but some of the young ladies failed to be there in time to hear it.—M. S.

Boys, why is it that you visit some other boy's room while he is trying to study his lessons? Don't you know you are disturbing him?—G. B. H.

We had some cold weather the last two days. It was so cold that the water froze down at the swamp. The ice is thick enough to skate on.—F. L.

Some of the items written by the higher grades show very poor penmanship particularly those written by some of our large boys. Their writing is an indication of careless habits the neat boys send neat work to the printing office.

What a queer looking thing a train must be, as soon as one passes every one in the school-room actually strains their neck to get a glimpse of the queer looking train, it must be something strange because every one in the room looks and stares at it until it goes by even an old freight.—P. J. S.

The carpenters are working busily on the new waterhouse back of the shop building. This will be used not only for supplies for the shops and engineering department, but the completed products from these departments will be stored there.—Indian Leader.
