I'd like to know

How many of you really knew, If dear St Patrick lived and grew;
Or was this Paddy but a myth, Without a home, or kith.

Were his eyes Irish green, or Alice Blue;

Did he wear snakes in his boots as some laddies do?

Was he born with the sense of keen Irish wit,

Or really now, wasn't he funny a bit?

WAS HIS hair carrot red, and his nose ruby too,

I'd like to know now; say, wouldn't you?

And was there a queer little catch in his voice,

That left the dear girls not a bit of a choice?

Is it true that the girls on St. Paddy's day wear,

In hopes that they'll meet a Patrick some where?

A four leaved shamrock of true Irish green,

Ah girls you blush: It is true I ween.
Now really and truly if this is all true,

I'd like to have known Paddy dear, wouldn't you?

I wonder, I wonder, if under the sun, St. Patrick didn't leave a son, just one?

A would be Bridget.

ALL INDIAN School employees should keep in touch with what is going on in the Indian Service. There is no better way than by subscribing for several Indian papers in various parts of the Service. These papers do not want to outline a policy of solving the Indian question but to let our friends know what is going on locally in our schools. There are many good papers of this description, among them the "Arrow," "Indian Leader," "The Indian News," "The Advance," "The Indian School Journal," and others, and not the best nor the worst, the CHEMAWA AMERICAN.

Chemawa Congratulates Haskell

It is reported that the commercial department is to be re-established at Haskell in the future. This is an excellent move and the department has shown good judgement in making it. Haskell first inaugurated a commercial course, and its graduates are now filling good positions, being counted as very good and efficient clerks and stenographers. There is a demand for this class of workers and we trust that Haskell will again be successful in supplying a portion of this demand.—The Weekly Review.
