"Blame where you must, be candid where you can,
And be each critic, the good natured man."—Goldsmith.

JOSHES

This poem got in by mistake, young ladies. Do not read it. Do not read the part that is upside down:

"'Tis a thing of evil,
And it can not be suppressed,
May it never, never sieze you,
May it never bring you unrest.

For 'tis horror in disguise.
It may cause you displeasure,
"'Tis not fit for female eyes;
Head no further, my dear lady;
Even though 'tis upside down.
Yes, I knew that you would read it,
With the co-eds of the town—
Curiosity is rampant
—Ex.

LAZY BOY.

Tommy—Wotcher goin' to be when you grow up?

Johnny A bricklayer, I guess.

Tommy—Aw, that ain't no nice thing to be. Whadda you wanna be that for?

Johnny—There's so many days in the year bricklayers don't have to do no work.—Ex.

The following three rules are said to have been given by an old Quaker to Senator Scott, of west Virginia, when he was a young man. In following them, the senator claims to have made his success in life.

"Not what thee eats, but what thee digests, will make thee healthy.

"Not what thee earns, but what thee saves, will make thee wealthy.

"Not what thee reads, but what thee remembers, will make thee wise.—Ex.
