"HOW I WILL MAKE A HOME"

By Bessie Chloquin, Klamath.

First, every structure has its foundation and I have been building mine ever since I could remember, the most important step which I have taken is Christianity, education and good morals, together with others which I shall not mention as time will not permit me, but these three steps seem very important to me as does also my literary and industrial education.

After I finish my schooling, I will start to support myself alone in this world with no one to help me.

I have but few dollars to start with outside of my industrial education and here I am using it in a right way and have joined the dressmaking establishment and got my daily earnings by honest work and labor.

From year to year the work will be continued and at the same time teaching and helping others who have had no opportunities in literary and industrial work.

And as the years go by I am getting old and gray. I resign from my industrial work and rest in my cottage all the rest of my years, and I live a quiet old life amidst my pets—such as birds, cats and squirrels, as I am fond of pets.

Dear reader, do not feel sorry for me for this is the joy of my life.

By Harry Quechpahma, Warm Spring.

How I will make a home is first I will clear the place up where I am going to have my ground cultivated and burn all the shrubs and old things that are around the place, and fence it up and plow where it can be done.

But I may not do all these things in one year because it takes money to build a home that is needed for a family if I am going to have any.

It may take me a couple of years to do all these things and next is I will try what I can raise on my place, and also build some kind of a barn to keep my animals in and also vegetables that I may raise.

Next is I will build a little house so that I can keep my things in and also for my bedroom and kitchen.

After all I may get married to some kind of a woman and live little better than when I was a bachelor.
