What I Will Do in Vacation

From Eighth Grade

"What shall I do in vacation?" Now as school draws near to an end, this is the question that I want to solve properly so as to be well profited by it. Vacation, I think is one of the most important times of our school days. This is the time to give our brains rest from a year's work and to prepare them for the next term. Therefore my vacation time, if possible, will be spent out in the fresh air where I may have lots of good times.

To accomplish this I shall choose some good class, happy crowd of boys and invite them for a camping expedition. We shall locate a beautiful place where can fish and hunt. Of course we shall we take with us some fishing and hunting materials. Near a river and by a little brooklet in a thickly forested hillside will be our camp.

Oh, how happy we shall be! Early in the morning we will be cooking our breakfast and each one of us will tell humorous stories, sing, or giving riddles while waiting for the things to cook. After breakfast we shall be ready for a day's adventure. We shall divide our crowd into three parties. One party will be going fishing, the other, hunting, and the last party will pick berries and prepare the meal. We shall do these pleasure in turn each day.

Just imagine how nice it will be to be in the woods, in the warm summer days; to be surrounded by the beautiful bushes under some big trees, where mother earth is carpeted with beautiful soft grass and the rocks are covered with yellowish green moss; where we will be invited to walk barefooted; to watch the rushing, glittering waters of the river, the logs that are carried from its upper course to the ocean. Now and then we shall see some one on the boat rowing across or going up and down the river. We shall be tempted and shall procure two or three boats. There is lots of fun in racing.

In the afternoon when the sun is almost too hot to go fishing or hunting we shall be setting on the hillside watching and listening the waters of a brooklet which are surrounded by the everchanging appearance that nature has made for the comfort of human eye and for the birds and other animals to live in.

In the evening around a big camp fire we will be roasting some meats or fish and each telling the days adventure. After supper we will be ready for a good sleep as we all will be very tired and surely we will enjoy sleep.

This is my idea of a vacation. Have fun and insure good health.
