

INDUSTRIAL NOTES

Dolly Gray is dead. Dolly is one of our pet deers.

Ignatius J. Bart is a new member of the harness shop. He has been there before.

Fall sown grain is coming on nicely and these warm days are making it grow rapidly.

Mack Colby, Sam McCush and Albert Garry are rushing their new forges to completion.

The tailor boys are making more outside people clothes this year than they did last year.

David Risling made new handles for all of the tools in the Blacksmith Shop the past week.

John Sulky and Philip Warren of Grande Ronde are back to their benches in the carpenter shop.

Fall plowing has been suspended on account of rain. We hope soon to continue the work.

Mosher Johnson and Paul Dirks were busy making sundry repairs in the employe's Club kitchen.

We are all looking forward to the talk Mr. Westly will give us in the chapel next Monday evening.

Grover Colby and Harry Queahpahma made a nice meat safe for the employe's Club kitchen this week.

Silas Albert and John Sulky made a pair of screen doors and frame for the employe's Club kitchen.

The farmers moved into the new barn last week and have been rejoicing over its handiness and comfort.

Leon Reinkin made Mr. Farrow a nice pair of trousers, English style, this week. Mr. Farrow says they are an excellent fit.

Mrs. Cooper's girls made simply delicious bread. No woman in Oregon can make better bread than our Domestic Science girls.

Among those who have been added to the carpenter force the past week are Aleck and Edward Ashley from Flat Head, Montana.

Mr. Smith repaired the lights in the new barn the early part of the week and now the farmers are delighted by having the barn so well lighted.

Thomas Yallup has just finished a pair of nice trousers for himself. Mr. Beck says that Thomas will make a first class tailor if he sticks with it long enough.

The gardeners are learning the good habits of the farm boys. Yesterday five gardeners were seen riding on a loaded wagon, that was loaded heavily enough for the horses to pull.

There has never been a lovelier more instructive industrial meeting than the one held in the chapel on Monday night. Mr. Swartz fully understood his subject. Hay and the interest shown was proven by the number of questions asked.

While the farmers were digging up the wire and posts along the line of the street car they encountered a yew post that had been set out over 4 feet in the ground and had a hard time to get it out. The post had been set quite a number of years but showed no signs of decay.

The lady Industrial teachers met in the Reading Room at McBride Hall on Wednesday evening, all being present. Assistant Superintendent Campbell presided. Quite a spirited meeting was held and since the meeting several have remarked that the meeting resulted in much good for the advancement of our Girls' Department.
