ELSEWHERE IN THE SERVICE

Mr. George P. Phenix, who has charge of the academic and normal training department in the Hampton Institute at Hampton, Va., gave this school a pleasant visit between trains while passing thru. He expressed himself as well pleased with the work he saw at the different departments of the school.—Indian Leader.

The Oneida Indians are receiving the last installment of their payment from the famous Kansas claim, that has been in the courts for the past twenty-five years. The amount received is $79.60 per capita.—Weekly Review.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones took their departure for San Juan agency, Monday morning. Mr. Jones has for nearly three years had charge of our school band, although recently acting as assistant clerk, and has made it one of the best of the Indian school bands. Mrs. Jones has been very successful as small boys' matron. This school sustains quite a loss in the change but we wish them abundant success in their new location.—Weekly Re-

Are you getting much out of employes meetings? Do you put much study or thought into it? Much good may be accomplished at these meetings, if they are entered into with a determination to accomplish something. The subjects on sanitation discussed by the several employes to whom they were assigned may be studied and used with profit in the various departments. Bear in mind nothing is accomplished without an effort.—Indian News.

All the employes in the service are teachers. The person in the industrial department is no less a teacher than the one in the schoolroom. The one is looked upon with the same respect as the other by the department. It should be so among the employes. The teacher in the schoolroom must work with and lead the child in its work. Its work is mental. The industrial teacher must work with and lead the child to do its work. Its work is mental and physical. Neither teacher can sit on the stool of do nothing and make his work a success. One thing to be taught the child is that it is honorable to labor. The child is an imitator. It learns much by observing and doing.—Indian News.
