

one of our great statesman who said, "A nation can never rise higher than the teaching of its Sacred Book." There is not a hospital or an asylum for the blind or a place for the cure of the insane except in lands where christianity has influence.

If you had trial in the country where in order to be save out side of your eight-foot high wall you must always have an armed guard with you. If you had lived in a country where man disappear or are murdered at your doors with no notice taken of it you would know what it is worth to live in a land where life is precious and the rights and developement of the individual of supreme impotanc.

I hear pupils say, they don't care nouch about religion, they don't pretend to be so very good and yet they rush to this place where the laws of the land are based on this very christianity they pretend not care for.

It seems to me they are no better than tramps. A tramp will eat a breakfast and pay nothing for it, he will take a coat he has not earned or steal a ride on train and count himself lucky, but a self respecting man regrets the necessity for lysing on the charity of the public.

I wish I could step aside and, as I heard one say a few days ago, bring before you in my place, the Cross-Scarred Christ. For it is the Sacrifice there made that lies at the bottom of our Safety and privelege and success as a nation, and it will be the vital influence of that life and death before us as individuals that will decide as to whether you and I shall come for much or little true and in Eternity.
