Industrial examinations are the vogue of the day. All seem to be interested.—Sherman Bulletin.

The farmer reports 500 bu. of corn. It is less than we expected but it is a little more matured than the corn of last year.—Ogala Light.

All visiting between this place and the school has been discontinued account of epidemic of measles now prevalent at the latter place. There are twenty-five cases under treatment. All are reported to be getting along.—Weekly Review.

An interesting industrial lecture was given Wednesday evening by Mr. Perci, the head carpenter. He made the subject of "Doors, their Parts and Uses" interesting to all. The participation of carpenter boys in the discussion was a pleasing feature.—Native American.

Dr. Matthews, our school veterinarian, visited the school herd for bovin tuberculosis last week and found all the animals in perfect condition. The doctor says that one rarely finds a herd of cattle where the temperature of all is so nearly normal.—Weekly Review.

A series of talks on simple emergencies has been organized at the hospital. It takes place every Thursday afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock. They are intended for girls who have no intention of taking a nurse's training and deal only with those things which may occur every day far away from a doctor.—Sherman Bulletin.

The burning of oil in lieu of coal and gas at Sherman is proving a success on every standpoint. It requires less fuel and does the work better. Coal and gas is used only in the cook stoves of the Teachers' Club and Domestic Science building. The last department to be fitted up for oil was the bakery shop.—Sherman Bulletin.

A disastrous fire occurred at Chillico, Nov. 28th, when the fine large school building was completely destroyed with its equipment and contents. The loss is a serious one to Chillico at this time, and we trust that temporary quarters will be provided so that the good work of the school will not be seriously interfered with.—Weekly Review.

General Colby of Nebraska paid Haskell a welcome visit last week. He brought with him his foster daughter, Maude, better known to many, perhaps, as Zintka, the little Sioux babe who was found by this kind friend after the battle of Wounded Knee, clinging to her dead mother. Maude has enrolled as a student in the Haskell business department.—Indian Leader.

The Indian Children at Kiowa mission school last year contributed generously to missions among the Indians. The money given was from the mite box offerings of the children.—Indian Friend.

Mr. Horace J. Johnson, who brought a party of girls from Round Valley, California, recently visited Haskell again last week on his way from Carlisle and the Mahauk conference.—Indian Leader.

Items of great interest continue to come from the mission at Tolchaco, Ariz., under the care of the Superintendent of our former mission at Tuba, W. B. Johnston. "There will soon assemble here the Committee on Unification of Language Work, appointed at the recent Rebooth Conference" and most important of all, "With the blessing of God we shall soon have the Holy Scriptures in the Navajo tongue."—Indian Friend.
