

INDUSTRIAL NOTES

Leon Reinkin is getting to be a good coat maker.

Mr. Westley was planting cherry seeds in the nursery last Tuesday.

Mr. Westley and his boys have finished planting a patch of early potatoes.

Mattie Zimmerman is making a very pretty blue hickory dress for Mary Campbell.

Eugene Williams was oiling Mr. Larsen's floor at Mitchell Hall last Tuesday afternoon.

The small engine and blower have been taken out of the boiler room at the power house.

Since Mr. Moran returned to Chema-wa the boys have learned to keep the power house clean.

Mr. Bowen and his force of boys are mowing the lawn in front of the small girls' home this week.

The blacksmith boys are assisting the carpenters in remodeling the old barn into a gymnasium.

The little engine that was used for force draft in the boiler room has been taken and placed where the engineers can practice setting valves on it.

Mike Oleson and George Horne are hauling the bricks which have been left over from the new hospital and the blacksmiths are piling them behind the wood shed.

The Seniors and Juniors have had the pleasure of cooking for the outside basketball teams. We all enjoyed the work, as it gives us a great deal of experience in our cooking.

Bessie Chiloquin is making a blue silk waist for Maggie Jerry.

Martha LeClair is making herself a pretty dark blue silk waist.

Annie Johnson made a pretty soft cushion for one of her friends.

Matilda J. Lewis made some very delicious biscuits in the domestic science department Monday morning.

The blacksmith boys have been working outside for the last three months such as sawing wood, fixing electric wires, digging post holes and digging ditches all over the grounds.

A SPURGEON RUSE.

Spurgeon, the famous English divine, once passed a stone mason who, after each stroke of his hammer, cursed and swore. Mr. Spurgeon laid his hand on his shoulder and looking kindly at him said: "You are an adept at swearing. Can you also pray?" With another oath he replied, "Not very likely." Holding up 5 shillings, Mr. Spurgeon said if he would promise never to pray he would give him that.

"That is easily earned," said the man with a fresh oath, and put it into his pocket. When Spurgeon left the man began to feel a little queer. When he went home his wife asked him what ailed him, and he told her. "It is Judas' money," said the man, and on a sudden impulse he threw it into the fire. The wife found it and took it out and discovered who had given it to him. The man took it back to Spurgeon, who conversed long with him, warning him, and at length was the means of saving him. He became an attracted member of his flock.
