Don't Borrow

Trouble---Hustle!

"Never trouble trouble, till trouble troubles you," and if you owe any money go to bed and sleep. "Let the other fellow walk the floor"—you need the rest to enable you to work and earn it to pay him back, and that is good, sound advice, says the New Idea Woman's Magazine for July.

If you worry yourself to death over the everyday annoyances of life, you will deserve all the suffering it creates, such as sickness, poverty, disappointment and loss of good looks, and can only boast of warped disposition.

All these conditions keep off the good things that might be yours for the taking.

In this great plan of creation it is certain that every man has a place; and if we are not in it and fulfilling the obligations it requires, no matter how hard, whose fault is it? We surely cannot blame that fact upon the Creator, for humanity should be constantly begging His pardon for misunderstanding Him so frequently as it does.

No, it is lack of mental activity and a desire to dodge our moral responsibilities;

we should put our finger on our lips and remember that once we were given dominion over the things of this earth, ourselves to be only a little lower than the angels. What has become of the gift? It was given for all time.

If we expect a good living to drop into our lap like a ripe plum, as it were, without troubling ourselves to earn it, needless to say we will get a shock, and it will take all the spunk we can scare up to cushion it so that it does not bowl us over.

So let us sing blithely, let us smile cheerfully, let us dress our best—and hustle!
