

the evening was as follows: Opening address, Levi Sorter; vocal solo, Vernie Cliffe; riddles, Fred Lewis; song, male quartette; pen picture, Calvin Darnell; recitation, Sarah Brewer; reading, Matilda John; jokes, Clarence Bardwell; current events, Orin French. Everything was well rendered, excepting the opening address, the song by the male quartette, the pen picture, the jokes and the current events, whose authors did not appear on the stage. Mr. Michel Wilson of the Excelsiors then furnished us some music from his phonograph after which we adjourned.

LOCALS

Mrs. Brewer went to Salem Monday on business.

This lovely weather is starting tennis players again.

Ellen Olney writes that she will soon return to school.

Chemawa was proud of her engineer boys on Monday night.

Four thousand pounds of flour arrived at the bakery from Portland.

The work on the power house is rapidly progressing. The brick smokestack is about completed, and the addition for the new boiler and class room is finished. A new roof is being put on the entire building, as the old one was about decayed.

Girls and boys who do not care to study while in the school room, and pass their time in play or seeing how sulky it is possible for them to be, had better be put to work outside of the school rooms and taught that time is valuable; 'tis too valuable to be lost.

Prof. Tillman, of Willamette University, gave an illustrated lecture in chapel Tuesday evening. The subject of discussion was, "Other Worlds than Ours," relating of course to other planets and their relation to one another and to the Earth. To one who has a grasp of such a vast subject as the one chosen by Prof. Tillman the lecture was intensely interesting. His manner of handling his subject and making clear astronomical wonders is certainly very pleasing and instructive.
