

INDUSTRIAL NOTES

BY PUPILS

David Graham is fireman this week.

Paul Queachpalma is ironing off a light wagon.

Harry Queachpalma has charge of the garden detail.

Fred Wright and Fred Bushman are now working in the bakery.

Simon Mathews is making a wagon tongue in the blacksmith shop.

Mrs. Brewer and Pedro Chevio are frosting the cakes for Christmas.

Eugene Williams oiled the floors in the reading rooms of Mitchell Hall and Brewer Hall.

Cyril Morrisette and Frank Souvigner are working for the contractor connecting steam pipes.

The blacksmiths would be greatly benefited by having electric lights in the shop these dark mornings and evenings.

Eugene Williams and Lee Evans painted the floor and kalsomined the walls in Miss Noble's apartment at the employes' building.

Matilda Gibeau is Miss Skipton's servant girl. Matilda always attends to her work and receives much praise from those she works for.

The blackemiths have just finished 12 hydrant wrenches for the hydrants about the grounds and one is to be chained to each hydrant and will be kept there for that one to insure quick use.

SOCIETIES

Excelsiors

The Excelsior Literary Society held its regular meeting Thursday, December

17, 1908. The house was called to order by the president and the roll was called. A few members were absent. The question for debate was, "Resolved, That Indian boys and girls should be in separate Institutions." The affirmative side of the question was upheld by Malvina Moxley and the negative side by Leon Reinkin. The subject was thrown open to the house, and a number of members spoke on the subject. The decision of the judges was in favor of the affirmative side of the question. During the debate a note was received from the Nonpareil Literary Society challenging the Excelsior Society to a series of three debates. After the debate it was read and put before the house. A motion was made and carried that the challenge be held over until the next business meeting, but as the next regular business meeting could not be held for at least three weeks the president decided to call a special meeting. The meeting then adjourned.

Reliance

The Reliance Literary Society met in regular session Thursday evening December 17, being called to order by President, J. R. Brown, only a few members not responding to roll call. Reading of minutes of previous meeting was heard and approved. The President stated the business to be settled. First came colors for the society and how they were to be worn, which was settled after brief debates by some of the members.

The main feature of the meeting was the revision of the constitution and by-laws, postponed until the next business meeting. The President then referred back to election of members. Wm. Major was balloted upon and declared elected. Last under order of business was the reading of the program for the next meeting. On motion to adjourn, and same being seconded, all voted to adjourn.
