

INDUSTRIAL NOTES

BY PUPILS

Clifford Rolfe is back again working on the garden detail, after having worked in the bakery.

Joseph Carrasco and Walter Miller gave a general cleaning to the boiler flues at the power house.

Lorette Fillier and James Smith are preparing the material for repairing the fence around the industrial building.

Mrs. Fickle's sewing room girls made the towels for Mitchell Hall last week, for which the boys are very thankful.

The contractors are putting breeching on the boiler and as soon as they are connected the new boiler will be ready for use.

Haines DeWitt is the handy man in the carpenter shop. During his spare moments he makes corner shelves and tables.

The carpenters are expecting to commence work on the old hospital and remodel it for use of the domestic science department.

The new tables in the dining room are much appreciated. Four more tables are needed to seat the large attendance at the dining hall.

Now the new boiler is running. It will run the small engine and pumps, while the other boilers are cut out on account of putting in new pipe connections.

The new boiler in the power house was prepared to steam up during the period of time it would take before the other boilers were connected on to the steam head. The first heavy fire was put in on Tuesday.
