

TAILOR SHOP NOTES.

Gabriel Anderson is finishing a pair of trousers. He is getting to be a good tailor.—John Rainville.

John Lee is getting to be a good button-hole worker.—Willie Luke.

Gabriel Anderson is improving in trousers making and is making Hugh Jackson's trousers.—Ed. Freelander.

Herbert Reinkin is getting to be a good trousers maker.—Willie Baines.

CUTTING TALBE CLIPPINGS.

We all appreciate Mr. Talbe's able efforts in conducting our basketball games, which we enjoy so much.

The Tailor Shop is pleased to report a visit from our esteemed friend Mr. W. S. Bardwell, who is visiting his son Clarence and who, by the way, was a very successful and promising apprentice in the Tailor Shop.

Joe Simpson is rapidly becoming a good trousers maker, and in addition to making a tip-top garment, he is now able to design a draft, cut the goods, and then make a good garment. This means a great promise for the future of this deserving young man, and the Tailor Shop is pleased to report such, it being the result of an earnest effort.

Gideon Hanbury and Harry Joe are making a double-breasted sack coat for Hugh Jackson, and from present indications, it will be an improvement upon their last effort in that line.

Willie Banes is improving in his understanding of trouser-making and we are pleased to report that he will soon be able to handle a pair of trousers in a very creditable manner.

Silent Harry Joe is still seen, but never heard. His presence is felt in a very beneficial manner by exhibiting all the evidences of becoming an artist at his business; i. e., coat making.

We are very thankful to welcome Robt. Dundas back to our midst again. He was spending a few days visiting Dr. Fisher's department, but like a sensible young man, he realized "There is no place like home," so he returned to the Tailor Shop.

PUPILS' ITEMS.

J. T. Rainville is expected here this week.

We all worked hard during our examination.

John Hunter is getting along fine in the sixth grade.

The boys will be glad when Mitchell Hall is finished.

McKinley Moses, Arthur Steel and Jerry Reese are the orderlys in the afternoon.

Walter Morrisette is now working in the wagon shop and he says that he is very interested in the work he is doing.

We would caution our young men that it is inadvisable, unless some good reason obtains, to leave a trade at which they have been working for one or two years to take up some other occupation which at the moment happens to attract them. This will be discouraged at Carlisle because the faculty is of the opinion that continued changing of occupation is a waste of time and does not cultivate stick-to-itiveness. The world is in need of steady men—men who not only know one thing well, but have the faculty of steadfastness—men who at all times can be relied upon. Beware of the "Jack of all trades;" he is not conspicuous for his success.—The Carlisle Arrow.
