

INDUSTRIAL NOTES

BY PUPILS

The workers in the harness shop are always busy at their usual cutting and sewing on the different parts of the harness. They also have plenty of repair work to do both in the harness and shoe department.

The wheels are all turning at the laundry and everybody is busy. The laundry is not as comfortable this cold weather as some of the other departments. The cement floors, and more or less water floating around with one small stove and a short supply of wood keeps everybody working in order to keep warm.

The laundry receives the soiled clothes from the different quarters Monday morning. As soon as the whistle blows the clothes carriers begin their march to the laundry with their large bundles. Each building's clothes are marked and placed at the laundry and delivered Friday to the clothes press, to be issued every Saturday by the quartermasters to the individual whose number is marked on each piece.

LOCALS

A bird in the dining hall is worth a dozen in the snow.

Mr. Ernest Brewer left for Tacoma, Washington, last Friday. He will remain on his farm at Gardendale during the winter.

Reuben Saunders left for Tacoma, Monday afternoon. Rube has two months' vacation from Watt Shipp Co. of Salem and will spend that time with Ernest Brewer at Gardendale.

The boys who throw away their underclothes this kind of weather have plenty of space in their heads for bad colds to settle. They think that all they need to pull through the winter is a good appetite and a sled.
