

TAILOR SHOP NOTES.

Go to Nick Hatch for your moccasins. Mr. Enright has a cat which can understand tailoring.

Gilbert Conner is the chief fireman at the tailor shop this week.

See Ralph Copeland for caps; he generally has some on hand, made to order.

It may be that the first team can play a little better now because they have new socks.

Ralph Copeland can be seen making caps every day when he is not doing anything else.

Gilbert Conner put a patch on his sleeve. If you look at his sleeve you can't notice it.

Louis Fowner, the merchant tailor, is shortening trousers for Leo Toneket, one of the new pupils.

The tailors are through putting stripes on the officers' trousers and now we are waiting for more striping.

Luther Clements is very anxious to get through with his trousers, so he does not take time to write items for the American.

Mr. Enright has a cat that can play ball and if the baseball team can't play ball come to the tailor shop and learn to play ball from the cat.

Why not send Captain Sortor to the cannery and give such a fellow as Larsen, Queachpalma and Michel Wilson a chance at the short stop position?

Nick Hatch, one of the tailor shop apprentices, is a great hand at pressing his suits. Every spare moment he can be seen pressing his trousers and coat.

Leon Reinkin, our fellow apprentice in the tailor shop, has been permitted to work in Salem, where he has charge of the merchant tailoring for Geo. W. Johnson & Co.—By APPRENTICES.

NONPAREIL PARTY.

The Nonpareil Society gave a party in the school gymnasium on Thursday evening with about one hundred and twenty present. The guests started to arrive at about 8 o'clock. Games of all kinds were played until about 10 o'clock, when the refreshments were served, which consisted of cocoa, sandwiches, candy, oranges, ice cream and cake.

At about 10:45, when oranges were beginning to take an active part in playing catch in the middle of the floor, which plainly showed that everybody was through eating, time was called and the guests departed to their quarters.
