

CHANGE ON COINS.

The eagle, buffalo and Indian are to be banished from the crisp, green bank-notes, issued by the government in the future, almost as ruthlessly as they were banished from their early haunts in years gone by. Even this last resort will be denied them on the ground that they can and have been too easily counterfeited. The process of the elimination of the eagle, buffalo and Indian from the notes and coins of the United States is the result of a desire for uniformity and simplicity of design, in addition to the determination to make counterfeiting more difficult. At the present time there are nineteen designs and under the new plan there will be only nine designs. All classes of notes of each denomination will carry the same portrait; no portrait will appear on the notes of more than one denomination, and the portraits selected are easily recognizable, excepting, perhaps, those of Salmon P. Chase and Alexander Hamilton. As Hamilton's likeness will be on the $1,000 note and Chase's on the $500 note there is little reason to feel alarmed.

The men who will have the pleasure of handling money on this scale are probably as familiar with the lineaments of the first chief justice and secretary of treasury as the ordinary public with the portrait of Geo. Washington, which will appear on the one dollar bills. President Lincoln's face will mark the five dollar issues and Grover Cleveland's will appear on the ten dollar denominations. Jackson's likeness will grace the twenty dollar issue; Grant's the fifty dollar and Franklin's the one hundred dollar bill. It will be noted that no portrait has been used excepting that of a dead President and this policy will be followed in the future. The new penny will no longer show the red brave. The new coin will depict the face of the man who thought God must have loved the common people, because he created so many of them. It is that of Abe Lincoln with a smile. The designer had considerable difficulty in finding a likeness of this man with a smile on his face, but finally did so. The men who are responsible for the contemplated changes in the notes and coins are striving to make the money safe, durable and beautiful. Ex-President Roosevelt had this in mind when he asked St. Gaudens to make the design for a coin which was rejected. The schedule answers the purpose of loyalty and history, sufficiently nonpartisan.—Daily Drovers Telegram.

 THE KIND OF BOY WANTED

Boys are always in demand because they are the material out of which men are made, and as first class material is always at a premium in every line of trade, so the boys who give promise of making first class men are most eagerly sought after.

The boy the world wants today is the one who can be trusted to handle money without any of it sticking to his fingers and finding its way into his pockets. He will take as much interest in the affairs of his employer as if they were his own, and will stay fifteen minutes without being asked, to finish a piece of work after the whistle blows and the rest of the men have quit work. He will be able to write a business letter and spell the words contained therein correctly, and to add up a column of figures promptly and accurately. He will lift his cap as readily to his sister as he would were she the sister of some other boy; and he will not be ashamed to go to church with his mother, show her into her own pew and sit beside her during the service. He will be careful in making a promise, and just as careful about keeping it. He will have sufficient moral backbone to say no to those who would lead him astray, and will have enough courage to own that he is striving to make a man of himself.
