

professional ladies and gentlemen, but working men and women, with hands and bodies trained to do honest, decent work.

These are only a few of our successful boys: William Minor, of the class of 1897, is employed at his trade of tailor, and has been so engaged for a number of years at North Yakima, Wash.

Alpheus Dodge of the class of 1897, when last heard from, was a harness maker at the Ft. Peck school, Montana. He has been employed in the service almost continuously since graduation.

Frederick Freeman, of the class of 1897, was employed for a number of years as tailor at the Puyallup school. Last year he resigned and went into business for himself in the city of Tacoma.

Richard Graham, of the class of 1897, is and has been for a number of years, employed as clerk in one of the departments at Washington, D. C.

Douglas Holt, of the class of 1897, is a tailor and has a shop of his own at North Yakima, Washington.

Adolph Farrow, class of 1898, after graduation, went into business for himself at Athena, Oregon, and opened a harness shop. After two or three years, he was offered the position of harness-maker at Chemawa and held that position creditably for four years. He then resigned in order to look after his farm in Umatilla county. Since then he has been farming and is now running a harness shop in connection with his farm at Athena.

George Bernier, class of 1900, after graduation, completed the law course at Willamette University, and is now an attorney in Baker City, Oregon.

Harry Holt, class of 1900, has been for a number of years a clerk for one of the large lumbering companies in the Northwest. He is living at the present time in Toppenish, Washington.

Reuben Saunders, class of 1900, has been employed in the bicycle and automobile shops of Salem and Portland since his graduation, being at present employed by Mr. Watt Skipp of Salem.

William Ingram, class of 1902, is the baker for the Oregon Insane Asylum and has held that position for several years.

Leon Parker, class of 1906, is foreman of a large ranch near Briceland, Calif.

Henry Dillstrom, class of 1907, is running a dairy farm near Chemawa.

William Blodgett, class of 1904, has been working at his trade in Portland and Tacoma, and now has a tailor shop of his own at Puyallup, Wash.

W. H. Lewis, of the class of 1885, is one of the prominent and well-to-do citizens of Wrangell, Alaska.

James Stewart, class of 1885, is president of a bank at Lapwai, Idaho, with a capitalization of $50,000. He is employed at a large salary in the forestry department of the government.

Henry Sicade, one of the early day students of Chemawa, is one of the prominent business men of Tacoma, Wash.

Silas Moom, one of our prominent athletes, is blacksmithing in the Northern Pacific Car shops at Tacoma, Wash.

On complaint of Albert B. Reagan, teacher in charge at LaPush, Wash., one "Scotty" was arraigned before the Justice of the Peace, Mr. A. W. Smith, yesterday, and fined $109 for giving whiskey to some 20 Indians of the Quileute tribe at the Celebration at Forks, Wash., July 5, this year. Mr. Reagan is also working on other whiskey cases with the view of stopping the whiskey traffic with Indians in these parts.—Correspondent.