

The first barn was built in 1885 and was a simple wooden structure. It was replaced by a more modern one in 1910. The current barn was built in 1925 and is made of concrete and steel. It is a large, two-story building with a gambrel roof and several cupolas. The barn is situated on a large, flat field and is surrounded by a fence. In the background, there are several tall evergreen trees.

The barn is a fine example of early 20th-century agricultural architecture. It is well-maintained and is still in use today. The barn is a landmark in Chemawa and is a source of pride for the community. It is a reminder of the hard work and dedication of the people who have lived and worked in Chemawa for many years.
