

CUTTING TABLE CLIPPINGS.

The tailor shop force is, as usual, busy as bees; bubbling over with good things and good tidings. Perfect quiet, good order and earnest effort is manifest everywhere. Everybody is making progress and accomplishing some good now which will return to them in the future with a "well done" smile.

Alex Cajete is busy making full dress costumes for members of the Nesika Club, which are to be worn at the entertainment this evening. The sartorial effort of the tailor shop will be worth the price of admission to this high class entertainment. So get acquainted with the style (a la minstrel boy), put on your glad rags and mingle with society tonight. It will prove to be a good remedy for the "blues" and the aforesaid golden smile will appear.

Nick Hatch cut and trimmed six pairs of trousers for the printers' basketball team, and we wish to state that Nick is doing excellent work at his chosen trade. His efforts are beginning to assume the appearance of completeness and his work at the cutting table is most encouraging.

The Chemawa system of training a boy must be very excellent, as we have met prominent educators at our school who expressed surprise at our splendid mechanical departments and what they are doing for the students. They stated that they would endeavor to introduce into their school a system similar to ours. There is not to be found anywhere a school in tailoring that will compare with Chemawa, where the boy has the excellent opportunity of preparing himself to become master of the task at which he is engaged. All a Chemawa boy need ask for is raw material—he can do the rest. Why? Because he is trained, and stored away in his mind he has knowledge that he cannot sell, barter, mortgage, or lose, and which in time of need proves a source of help and comfort to him. It is the way by which he commands the respect of his fellow man and sesame that opens the door of opportunity. The tailor shop is full of opportunity for the boy who is looking for it and we have room for more good boys now, so if you want to become a good tailor, get into the tailor shop and be patient. Working, and working, and working, ever working, is the price you must pay for your success. He who becomes discouraged because he must work, work, work, will not find a resting place in the tailor shop.—TAILOR SHOP.

BREVITIES.

Have you heard the story entitled "Thirty-four exchanges in fifteen minutes?" Ask Ed Lynch about it.

Mr. H. G. Wilson, superintendent of allotted and other Indians of Western Oregon and Northern California, has been in Chemawa during the week engaged at work connected with his office. At present he is making his headquarters at Roseburg, Oregon.

After the game between the larger boys of the student body organizations on last Saturday the junior teams lined up for the second time this season and battled for honors. The Reds out-classed their opponents and ran up a 16 to 0 score, the score of the previous game between the same teams being 27 to 0 in the Reds' favor. These teams' average weight was about 125 pounds to the man and the 1910 rules were carried out to the T.
