PROGRESS.

In the very nature of things the world moves—and so must people. It is necessary for a people to move, and to move along right lines, too, at that. Progress as we see it means going ahead—advancing. There is getting to be so much hustle and bustle in the world that there is not much opportunity for those who will not wake up and join in the game of progress.

To be a leader of men and women, to lead in educational pursuits, in art, in fact, in any honorable calling or profession, is the thing to strive for and upon which should be centered every faculty of the mind. To have an aim such as this, backed up with the necessary determination, will cause you to progress notwithstanding you may encounter the greatest obstacles.

Determined effort and unwearied pursuit has achieved more than all the so-called genius of those of meteoric careers. If you have once established the "work habit" the greatest obstacle to progress will have been overcome. You will be certain to "get there," as they say, and when you "get there" rest assured that you shall have progressed—in some degree, at least.

RENA MANN.

It becomes our sad duty to chronicle the death of Miss Rena Pauline Mann who died of tuberculosis at Chemawa about 7 o'clock on the morning of July 11th, 1912. The remains were cared for at the undertaking parlors of Clough & Lehman of Salem. Services will be held at 2:30 this afternoon at the Catholic church in Salem and interment will be made in the Odd Fellows' cemetery in the same city, it being Rena's dying wish that she be interred in this cemetery as her grandmother was buried there.

Bena was born at Placerville, Eldorado County, California, on November 14, 1893, and was aged 18 years, 8 months and 27 days at the time of her death. She came to Chemawa about 10 years ago, her father being the blacksmith at the school. She was an unusually bright girl, standing high in her studies, and possessing marked musical talent. For a number of years she had been a member of the Chemawa Chamber-Music organization and the orchestra, playing violin.

Rena had a personality which won her friends everywhere. A host of friends will hear of her untimely end with unfeigned sorrow. To the bereaved parents and relatives we extend our heart-felt sympathy.

Mr. Gillett returned last Saturday evening from Corvallis, where he had passed a few weeks in attendance of a short course in agriculture at the Oregon Agricultural College.
