NOW YOU SEE IT.

George W. Coleman, a Boston man, who spoke to the newspaper men at Columbia this week pulled a neat "gag." "I'm going to show you something which I have in my pocket" he said. "I never saw it, you never saw it. You can look at it, and then I'll never see it again, you'll never see it again, nobody will ever see it again. How many of you believe me?" Four or five men held up their hands doubtfully. Then Mr. Coleman took a peanut from his pocket, shelled it, exposed the kernel, which nobody had ever seen. Then he ate the kernel. —Kansas City Star.
