THE TURNER TRIBUNE

PEARL P. HASSLER, EDITOR

Published Every Thursday at Turner, Marion County, Oregon

SUBSCRIPTION $1.25 PER YEAR Entered at the Postoffice at Turner, Oregon, as second-class matter, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

When a politician is deaf to the voice of the people, it is because he hears money.

We have a democrat in Turner who lives on the corner, who blames the republican party for everything, even the hot sun and the dry weather. He has been blaming the party for the past forty-five years and getting nowhere.

Tragedies like the one which took place south of Salem on Tuesday night will follow for all time under the present prohibition laws. The moonshine has no place in society and should be crushed, but the present statute of the enforcement law will not avail as it is drawn. Since the enactment of the law, crime has doubled. Government regulation of liquor is the only solution in which to abolish this present crime wave of the country.

Lively times are forecasted for the political jogs before next primary day. Candidates for the legislature are feeling their way and the country's sepiatorship question is being whispered among the faithful. There will be changes made in the selection of men and it appears there is positive proof of an upheaval of the taxpayers of Marion county at present that bids fair to develop into unusual activities by the votes at the next election. We pity the officeholder next year.

CRANBERRY INDUSTRY

The cranberry is the only fruit grown in the United States whose course of travel is from east to west. Realizing that this state is a fruit-producing state, men of broad vision in the district at the mouth of the Columbia river entered the cranberry game and have developed it to such an extent that at the present time it is supplying a great many of the cranberries used on the Pacific coast, but there are still berries shipped from the east.

Land that was considered waste has been made productive. The total investment in land and improvements in the district amounting to a million dollars.

Those members of the Oregon State Editorial Association who were fortunate enough to visit the cranberry bogs in Clatsop county, last fall were astounded at the magnitude of the industry.

The cranberry industry on the Pacific coast, while new, already occupies a firm place among the horticultural industries of the Northwest. Berries of very fine quality are grown in Oregon and Washington, in the district of the mouth of the Columbia river. Here is a great frost-free zone, with abundant rainfall, having a climate admirably adapted to the growing of cranberries.

Picking will commence in September and will extend over a period of four to six weeks. Many people are attracted to this district by the fact that they can earn good wages picking cranberries, and at the same time enjoy the mild weather of the Oregon coast climate in September.

To the rule that the Oregon fruit is the best grown anywhere, the cranberry is no exception. It is a very luscious and well flavored fruit which has made a great impression wherever introduced. There is a prejudice in some quarters in favor of the eastern cranberry. This is due more to habit than reason. The cranberry grown on the east shore of the United States is indeed a wonderful fruit, but the cranberry grown on the Pacific coast is of equal good quality and requires less sugar when put up. The industry is well organized and the fruit is marketed cooperatively. Berries will appear on the markets shortly after the picking season is completed.

The cranberry associations of the coast are urging the purchase of cranberries by the housewife, early on account of the fact that there is a shrinkage in berries as the season progresses, and that thrifty housewife, by making an early purchase, saves just that much. Cranberries canned early in October taste just as good on Christmas day as cranberries cooked on Christmas eve.

Hint To Campers

When you leave that campfire, brother Put it out!
It is apt to breed another— Put it out!
Forest fires start from little When the woods are dry and brittle. So when you remove the kittle Put it out!
Do not leave one spark to smoulder— Put it out!
One small spark will soon grow bolder Put it out!
One small spark may prove a whale; There, when you hit the trail, Drown it with a water pail— Put it out!

Linn county is asking for five rural school teachers.

Kidnapped

While standing on the street last Saturday rubber-necking, Herman Peetz was invited by Jim Kelley and two other men to partake of a short ride to the country. He accepted the invitation and the ride ended about six miles the other side of Stayton. Peetz had no coat on and the weather was cold, very cold.

Be Careful

The fatal tragedy that occurred at Chemawa last Saturday night in which the wife brutally murdered her husband while asleep is but the culpable outgrowth of many marriages in which the principals do not look deep enough into the characters of their lives. It is quite easy to say "I will" and a divorce court to annul the word. A preacher at Chicago in a sermon from his pulpit recently advised girls not to marry a man who swears, who doesn't respect his parents, who is not clean, who is lazy and who is a grouch. The same term may be applied to the girl. The couple in the affair at Chemawa were of different minds and characters said not to be the best.

An exchange says that a sharp nose indicates inquisitiveness; a dot nose indicates that it has been too darned inquisitive. We have both kind in Turner.

AMERICAN FOOD SHIP SAVES 18,000 BABES FROM STARVATION

Heroic Yankee Women Risk Lives to Rescue Children in Service of Near East Relief

Constantinople.—How the prompt action of Charles V. Vickroy, General Secretary of the Near East Relief, and Harold C. Jaquith, representative of that American relief organization in Constantinople, saved the lives of 15,000 orphan children and seven American relief workers in Alexandropol, Armenia, is what all the representatives of the Allied nations in Constantinople are applauding today.

For five years the Near East Relief organization had built up a work of mercy throughout the former Turkish Empire and Transcaucasia, to a point where 54,000 little children were being housed, clothed, fed, given medical attendance and taught, and over 54,000 others being supplied with food. Then suddenly, on February 5, last, there came hurried cable reports of renewed fighting in Armenia and Transcaucasia, where 75,815 of these little ones were located under the protection of the Near

WE SERVE YOU

Service!

We like to put it in capitals that way because we believe it is the most important thing in the battery business.

Of course we can't make a new battery out of an old one, or a good battery out of a poor one, or a long-lived battery out of a short-lived one. There are limits even to battery service.

But we can make any battery last longer and serve better if you give us a chance. We can make the Willard Threaded Rubber Battery do both—and it already holds records for long life and reliability.

We can always do more with a battery if we get a chance right at the start, although we are ready to help any time. Come in! You'll say, too, that we give— SERVICE!

East Relief. Consular representatives left the country. All foreigner piled onto ships and fled. War threatened to scatter the work and render vain the long, patient effort of the Near East Relief to salvage a whole nation's children.

But the American men and women who had cared for these little ones were undismayed. They refused to leave under bombardment, with hostile armies sweeping through the streets where the Near East Relief's great orphanages had been established, with all supplies cut off and no communication with the outside world, or with that far American homeland whose representatives these heroic men and women are, they stuck to their posts. The last food from America had come in on November 6, 1920.

It was not until four months later that the new governments of the Transcaucasian states were established on a solid basis. But famine threatened. An appeal was made to American philanthropy: "Critical need for food products in Caucasia," the cable read. "No limit to need in Armenia. New government promises better facilities for relief activity than former government." A few days later, a further piteous plea followed: "Total orphans in Alexandropol 18,000. Supplies in Alexandropol now half-rations, April 2nd to 19th. After May 1st, nothing."

But this splendid American relief organization had not waited. Food was already on the way. On April 22, Charles V. Vickroy, general secretary of the Near East Relief, called: "Expect ship first week in May; 1,000 tons rice; 1,000 tons wheat flour; 400 tons cornmeal, corn flour, hominy; 30 tons sugar; 500 tons beans; 5,000 cases corn syrup from New York and New Orleans direct to Batum. Additional 1,000 tons wheat flour from Pacific Coast June 1st."

The seven American relief workers in charge of the 18,000 little ones in Alexandropol called a last appeal: "No food at any price. Four days more and we are finished." But when the first relief ship "Quezon" entered the deserted harbor of Batum on May 1, there were just ten bags of flour left. The food ship had come in time. America had saved the day—and the 18,000 little orphans children, who had suffered so much and lost so much in their short, war-clouded lives, never knew that gaunt hunger in the robes of death had knocked at the door of the orphanage at Alexandropol—and that America had thrust the bony hand away.

"It is the great heart of America that made this work of salvation possible," Mr. Vickroy declared. "The money that sends the bread to these children comes from ten million homes throughout the United States. It comes from the hearts of the most generous people in the world, who cannot bear to know that half a world away, little children are facing hunger and death without helping them to life and happiness."

Mr. Vickroy is making a nationwide appeal to the people of the United States to keep this great work going. Contributions may be sent to Silverland H. Dodge, Treasurer, 1 Madison Avenue, New York City.
