VETERANS HAVE THEATER OF OWN

Volunteer Vaudeville Players Cheer Up Wounded Soldiers.

GIVE ONE SHOW EVERY WEEK

Audience in Wheel Chairs and on Canes is Generous With Applause—Performers Are Volunteers From the Attractions at the Washington Theaters—Show Starts Early Because Performers Must Do Their Stuff Before the Evening Performance.

What is thought to be the most appreciative audience—that assembles regularly for any show arrives in wheel chairs, on crutches, on wooden legs and in bandages. It is at Walter Reed hospital, one of the largest of the military hospitals in the country, located in the outskirts of Washington, D. C. The audience is composed of soldiers under treatment for injuries received in the World war, all trying to get what little fun they can out of life. The performers are volunteers from the attractions at the Washington theaters.

When the war was on it was the customary thing for actors and actresses to give entertainments at the camps and hospitals, but when the armistice was signed this business stopped to a large extent. It is in progress now only in hospitals, particularly those near large cities.

Performances are given every Wednesday afternoon for the Walter Reed patients in the Red Cross auditorium, capable of seating from 600 to 800 patients, according to the number arriving in wheel chairs. The auditorium has a stage—not one of the spacious kind ordinarily found in up-to-date theaters, but adequate enough for the purpose. Vaudeville is the entertainment.

Have Late Matinees.

The shows start when most people are quitting work or getting ready for dinner, necessarily so, because they are sandwiched in between the matinee and evening performances at the downtown theaters.

It is a 20 minutes' trip for the performers to the unique frame theater set in the center of the hospital grounds. Nurses take the patients there in wheel chairs; some arrive on crutches, others limp along with a cane or possibly two. The wheel chair cases are assigned to front positions in the assembly room, others taking their places in folding chairs at the rear. But there is room for everybody in the auditorium, including the nurses—everybody except the bed and mental cases.

The performance gets under way shortly before six o'clock, the program having been made up by Harry Stafford, entertainment director at the hospital, a member of the Red Cross organization, with the help of Miss Margaret H. Lower, field director, also of the Red Cross. Mr. Stafford is the announcer. There is no printed program.

Applause is generous. If ever entertainers were greeted enthusiastically it is by the patients at the hospital. From beginning to end the acts, comprising a program that runs until well after seven o'clock, are applauded.

Mr. Stafford and Miss Lower make up the program on Monday, going to the theaters and interviewing the performers, asking them to participate in the Wednesday performance. Many times the soldiers request that this act be obtained. Invariably the actors and actresses respond.

Because the actors must get back to the theaters in time for the evening performance dinner is provided for them at the hospital. When one troupe finished one of the Red Cross workers takes charge, ushering the men and women into a small dining room.

OCTOPUS DRAGS MAN TO DEATH

Fisherman Is Pulled From His Boat by Large Devilfish He Had Spear.

IS DANGEROUS SPORT

Devilfish After Capture Are Kept Alive in Salt Water to Supply Winter Demand Among Pacific Coast Japanese.

Sunrise Beach, Wash.—Dragged from his rowboat by a giant devilfish which he had speared, Albert Garness lost his life while several companion fishermen felt the searching tentacles of the big fish.

The devilfish season is at its height in the narrows off Gig Harbor, in this part of Puget sound, and fishermen declare the daily catch is remarkable for the size of the octopuses. About 40 grizzled veterans in open trawls are busy hauling in the traps and taking out the devilfish. The devilfish, after capture, are imprisoned in large tanks of sea water and kept alive to supply the winter demand among the Pacific coast Japanese.

There is an element of danger connected with this kind of fishing that lends spice to the work. Most of the devilfish caught will weigh around 30 to 40 pounds and vary in the spread of their tentacles from four to eight feet. This winter, however, fishermen have brought in extra large octopuses. The one which dragged Garness from the trawl measured 15 to 20 feet across the spread of legs.

Catching the devilfish is a prosaic occupation. In fact, the fish catch themselves. The traps, spaced to the depth of water from five to fifty fathoms, are fastened to long lines laid on the bottom. Some stretch out 10 miles into the sound, the average being three to four miles. The trap resembles a small, loosely built barrel, which is open at one end and baited with clams. After the fish has entered and devoured the clams, it generally retires in a tightly drawn bundle to enjoy perfect digestion. Fishermen in trawls and dories row over the trapping area to haul up the snares. The devilfish remains in the secluded shelter from sheer laziness, until exposed to the air. Then there is a sudden spring to life and the wriggling of the long tentacles is threatening. The octopus is immediately speared, but many are tenacious enough to fight many minutes.

Octopus meat is worth 25 cents a pound on the northwestern market.

SCOUT NOTES

Hollis Bones, Editor

Scout Executive, Zinser, of Salem was the guest of Troop No. 1 at Turner. During the course of the meeting he gave a talk to the boys on some of the phases of scouting, after which the meeting was thrown open to general discussion.

The Editor accompanied by Scouts, Hollis Bones and Mervin Pearson, linked out on the hills near the Miller saw mill Sunday afternoon. Bringing a few difficulties such as getting tangled up in the brush and getting stuck in the mud, we had a good trip.

On Monday evening the editor assisted by Ivan Miller and Walter Miller, took the members of Scout Troop No. 1 to Salem to attend a lecture and demonstration given by Albert Wiesendanger, forest ranger from Eagle Creek ranger station.

The lecture was both entertaining and instructive. He demonstrated the use of the various articles used in the forest service. Perhaps the one of most interest to the boys was the mess kit outfit used by the rangers.

The pictures of the forest along the Columbia river including the Whatum lake Boy Scout camp and the fire scenes were also interesting from an educational point of view.

Those making the trip were: E. P. Rowley, Ivan and Walter Miller, the Millers are members of the local troop committee. The scouts who were there were: Hollis Bones, Harold and Herbert Briggs, Mervin and Willie Pearson, David Alexander, Layton Mowery, James Given, Elmer Webb, Owen Thomason, and James Taylor. Myron Hewitt accompanied the party as guest of the Scouts.

TEXAS BOY SCOUTS' RECORD

The boy scout spirit of service was well interpreted at the recent South Texas State fair, where the scouts stood at all times to help. In addition to performing other good turns, the boys found 72 lost children, as traffic officers handled six parades, acted as runners for officers of the fair association, furnished escorts for children during the baby parade, parked automobiles in the fair grounds, met all incoming trains, and maintained an information bureau.

COL. WRIGHT GOES DOWN TO DEFEAT

Monday was a most beautiful day among the green hills and blossoming trees of the Cloverdale district. It was an ideal day for peace on earth to man; but one man of that community, accustomed to profanity and bravado, strode forth to battle in a spirit of revenge, only to meet his Waterloo at the hands of one superior in strength and science.

Monday afternoon at about 2:30 p.m., Col. W. F. Wright, noted bluff, scientific scrapper and strong on profanity, met Mr. W. H. Farr of his community at the farm home of Orville Garner. At the meeting Wright bused Farr in language unprintable and pulling off his coat challenged Farr to a combat. Mr. Farr objected to fighting, whereupon the bluffer and would-be bad man grew bolder. A fight was inevitable, and Oh Boy! we quote you the rounds:

Round 1—Wright led with his right to the jaw, which lacked steam; whereupon Farr remarked he did not succeed in breaking his jaw.

Round 2—Farr missed with a swing and Wright with another right. Both clinched and churned with right and lefts at intervals. Breaking away Farr discovered his hands bloody and Wright staggering with a bloody face.

Round 3—Farr shoved Wright away from him to avoid giving him more punishment. The Hon. Colonel's eyes were blacked, and nose peeled. Mr. Farr received not a scratch.

Wright came to town soon after washing up to buy beefsteak and salt; and Oh Boy! he was a pretty looking sight to say the least. Its a bet that some of the fighting conceit has been taken out of Wright's system, who has to our personal knowledge been a bluffer and an awful would-be bad man. He has whipped the writer several times (in his mind).

Now that Wright has had handed him a good whipping, we hope he will endeavor to lead a better life as a citizen. Mr. Farr could have punished him much worse, as he did not wish to fight, and regrets the damage done to his eyes and disfigurement to his prominent nose.

So, Col. Wright, endeavor henceforth to treat your fellowmen with due respect, and avoid black eyes and a mangled nose.

So far as the writer is concerned, you got what was coming to you, and you probably will get another dose of the same medicine one of these days unless you mend your bully ways. Am sorry I cannot console you and advise as to proper treatment for the bruised organs, but believe me old cock, I am very much delighted in the little treatment so ably handed you by Mr. Farr Monday afternoon and I rejoice in it to the fullest extent.

Wright says it was an old woman's fight, Farr says she does not care so long as he accomplishes his end.

Hoping you are handed another like package one of these days, I remain,

PEARL P. HASSLER.

County Y. M. C. A. Trip

Seventeen boys from the High Schools of Gervais, Woodburn and Aumsville were in Salem, Thursday, April 19th on an educational trip as guests of the County Y.M.C.A. They left at the Salem "Y" at nine o'clock and went directly to the Secretary of State's office, where Mr. Koser gave them an outline of the various departments of state government and of the work of the Board of Control, after which they were conducted through the Secretary of State's office by Homer Foster, for thirteen years an employee in that department.

Then to the Weights and Measures department, and then to the legislative chambers and to the governor's office. There the boys were met by Governor Pierce, who gave them a talk on the challenges and opportunities of High School boys today. From there they went to the Industrial Accident Commission and then returned to the "Y" for a swim and dinner, during which Meade Elliott, the Salem Boys' Secretary, led in stunts and games. At 1:30 the boys went to the Public Service Commission, highway department, into the supreme court building, where Justice Lawrence T. Harris outlined to them the judiciary system and particularly the work of the supreme court. After a half hour in the state printing office the boys made a visit to the penitentiary at the conclusion of which Warden Johnson S. Smith talked to the boys for nearly an hour on the workings of the institution and particularly along the lines of the value of discipline in personal life.

At five o'clock the boys returned home, expressing themselves greatly pleased with the day. This is the first state-house tour that has been conducted by the County Y.M.C.A. in an effort to give the boys first-hand information of our own state government. Other tours will be arranged in the next few weeks for the boys of other schools.

The following boys made the trip: Aumsville—Gains Fuson, Earl Tucker, Donald Spear, F. C. Sutton.

Gervais—Kenneth Brown, Ross McDougall, Sam E. Brown, Ellis McDougall, Jack Kuhn, Alton Byrd, Edwin Harper, John Henry, F. J. Deitsch, Charley Stokx, J. S. Harper.

Hubbard—Earl Beer, Walton Beer, Carl Parley.

WITH HIS BARE HANDS

Austrian Peasant, Age 71, Captures a Big Golden Eagle.

Capturing a full-grown golden eagle alive in his arms has brought local fame to a seventy-one-year-old peasant living in the Arlberg mountains on the Austrian side of the Bavarian frontier.

The man was approaching his haystack when he spied the eagle devouring a roebuck which it apparently had just killed by severing the animal's jugular vein. When it noticed him the eagle tried to fly away, but snow on the ground impeded its rise. The peasant rushed forward and, gathering the huge bird's wings and claws in his arms, succeeded in carrying it away captive despite its vicious attempts to get free.

HELPS BOY "COME BACK"

The "come back" of a young Hungarian boy of a Middle-west town, broken down in body from undernourishment and in soul by harsh treatment in his home, to a condition of usefulness and happiness, contains a fine tribute to the boy scouts, for the influence of the scout program and the boys' own help, have been the main factors in accomplishing this result. Early in the summer, Louis, who had left his unhappy home was found by relief authorities living alone, in a dug-out on the side of a hill on the outskirts of the city. The boy scouts then adopted him and taught him scoutcraft. Louis occupied the scout's cabin, keeping it neat and tidy and in perfect repair. He has made exceptional progress, entering into the spirit of the organization so thoroughly that he is considered one of the best members of the troop.
