DUNGEON IS FILLED WITH MONEY

Enormous Stock of Surplus Silver Kept in Storage Beneath the Tower of London.
Storage for a portion of the enormous surplus of silver coinage has been found in the dungeon beneath the Wakefield tower of the Tower of London, says The Times of that city. Other dungeons will probably be put to the same use.
No safer deposit in the world than the Wakefield tower could possibly be found. An armed guard of the Coldstream guards is always on duty there.
The silver hoard is inspected at frequent intervals by officials of the royal mint, who are guarded throughout the proceeding by armed police and "beef-eaters," while watch is kept outside by the garrison main guard.
The Wakefield tower itself contains wealth estimated at hundreds of millions. The famous Jewel house is located in the tower and there are, in addition to the crown jewels, included the Star of Africa, cut from the famous Cullinan diamond, other precious stones.
The dungeon beneath, where the hoard of unwanted silver reposes, is below the level of the river. It held its quota of prisoners when the history of the Tower of London was in the making.
She Knew Where She Stood.
A widely known Indianapolis speaker had been called by a church worker to speak at the entertainment at her church.
"I really can't," she demurred. "I have to leave the city."
She thought of another speaker and mentioned her name.
"Why not try her?" she said.
"Oh, I did try her," came back the answer. "You were to have been her substitute."
A new word in literary circles runs its course like an epidemic.

REGAINS RESPECT OF THE PEOPLE

Bigamist Returns to Work in Village Where He Was Sentenced to Prison.
New York.—Alexander Dujat, of Corona, former county clerk of Queens county, who served time in Sing Sing for bigamy, has assumed his duties as harbor master at the state barge canal terminal, Long Island City.

When Dujat was released from Sing Sing on August 23, 1919, he expressed confidence in his ability to regain the esteem of those who had known him as the village blacksmith for 39 years before he became county clerk. It was on the eve of his expected reappointment for that office that he was indicted and convicted on a charge of having married Miss Edna Marie Young of Corona.

Bundles of Banknotes Found in Rubbish Heap

London.—Bundles of treasury notes, to the value of £17,250, have been found in a derelict building in Bradford, reports the London Daily Express. They were stolen from Bradford railway station.
The notes, in bundles, were sent from London in a bullion box, addressed to the Bradford branch of the National Provincial and Union Bank of England. Both box and notes vanished from the parcels office of the Midland station.
Detectives found one bundle of the notes hidden under some rubbish in Waller's old brewery, which is near the station, and is without doors or windows. A further search brought the other bundles to light, but the box was not found.

Many Motor Vehicles.
According to figures compiled by the bureau of public roads in Washington, there are 12,238,375 motor vehicles in the United States. The report shows 19,800,112 private passenger cars, 69,459 taxicabs, buses and cars for hire, 182,714 motorcycles and 29,328 trailers.
Illinois State Roads.
The Illinois highway commission is working toward the completion of 1,000 miles of state paved road, or approximately enough to give an ardent tourist a run for his money.
Be Honest With Eggs.
If you sell eggs or birds for breeding purposes, be honest. Don't be a "one-order" breeder. If you are buying eggs of another breeder, do not try to make him think half of them were "broken" and otherwise damaged when they were not.
To Color Public Roads.
In England the suggestion has been made that the public highways be colored by means of some cheap chemical spray, which would make them less tiring to the eyes of the motor drivers.

IMPROVED ROADS

Smooth Surface Needed for Concrete Highways

If we are going to construct a concrete surface for our primary roads, it is very important that the surface of the concrete should be made smooth. Not only does this smoothness add to the comfort of the traffic, but it is also a factor in the lasting quality of the road surface. The ordinary layman very seldom thinks of the impact as the load passes over the rough road. If the pavement is rough the impact may be serious. Recent experiments by the United States bureau of roads have given us data concerning this impact, which is very interesting.
For instance, if truck wheels drop one inch when traveling at a speed of 16 miles an hour, and if the wheel load is 8,000 pounds, they will deliver a blow to the pavement of 56,000 pounds, or seven times as much as the load of the wheel. Under the same load, the pneumatic tires will deliver an impact equivalent to 14,000 pounds.
Often this impact is not caused by rough pavement but by a defective wheel, or a small obstruction dropped on the road surface, or if large solid chains are used. The wheel strikes the obstruction, rises over it, and falls, delivering an impact. Or, if the solid rubber tire is defective, each revolution of the wheel delivers an impact to the pavement.
It may be that with our heavy truck traffic, the cement surfacing will be stressed to an extreme extent by this impact on account of the rough surface or defective wheel. The surface cracks and breaks, and repairs are necessary.
The surface of the concrete for our roads can be made smooth if care is taken in surfacing the same, and the inspectors should see to it that this surfacing is rightly done.—E. B. House, Colorado Agricultural College.

Jacks Protect Highways From Overloaded Trucks

Weighting jacks with which the load carried by a heavy truck may be ascertained by road police are helping Maryland protect its new state roads from damage by overweight vehicles. Most roads are constructed to withstand a moving load of ten tons. Heavier loads break down the subgrade and start ruts, the police assert. Each weighing machine consists of a screwjack operating in an oil-filled cylinder. When four of these jacks are placed under the suspected truck, lifting it clear of the ground, its weight is transferred to the oil cylinders and can be read directly on the pressure gauges. If the truck is found to weigh more than ten tons, the excess material is unloaded by the roadside. The jacks are of aluminum alloy, weighing only 40 pounds each, so that the inspectors can carry them about in a light car.
State officials estimate that this percentage reduced overloading 75 per cent within 30 days. California has also recently passed a law limiting the weight of motor trucks and road officials and taxpayers are seeking to reduce the maximum permissible weight below the limit now set—30,000 pounds gross weight for four-wheeled trucks, and 40,000 pounds for six-wheeled vehicles, providing the axles are at least 96 inches apart, and there are not more than 800 pounds on each inch of rubber tire width.—Popular Science Monthly.

Iron Ore Quite Useful in Road Construction

Iron ore, found in northwestern Louisiana, has proven of great value in road building in that state and, in some localities where it has been used, has effected a saving of $2,000 to $3,000 a mile in the cost of construction. Highway engineers in Louisiana have been using the ore as a binder instead of sand clay and have found it far superior to that material in many instances. During 1922 the Louisiana state highway department completed 350 miles of new roads. Most of this mileage consists of gravel. The remainder consists of roads built of shells, sheet asphalt or bitulithic. The 1923 program includes a larger amount of asphaltic construction.

Growing Popularity of Autos Shows Road Needs

With the growing popularity of the automobile, there has come a parallel increase in the need of building up the highways. Of course, it is not to be done within a few years. Many sections of the Old World have excellent highways, but they have been built for centuries. But certainly, we should begin now to lay the foundation of a great highway system.

Let every man mind his own business—Servants

THERE is a certain type of person who thinks, always, that brusqueness, even rudeness, to the servants of his friends shows familiarity with the ways of the world. Let us hope that these persons are those who have had little chance to get about, little chance to mingle with those who know how things should be done—that they are those who have never had servants of their own, and have had few friends who numbered servants among their possessions. Sometimes, unfortunately, we meet women who have always been used to servants who yet have an overbearing attitude toward the servants of their friends. We always suspect that they gossip with their own servants.
Now, in the big cities, at least, servants resent an appearance of familiarity of a too informal sort on the part of employers' parts. In their relation as servants, especially where they have specialized, they wish to assume a deferential manner, just as they wish to have their employers assume a directing manner. That is part of the game. They expect the same treatment from their employers' friends, but there is a manner, between one

The SANDMAN STORY

THE BEST BOOK
THE soft-toned clock on the library mantle struck twelve, and the little boy chasing a butterfly, and who lived in a frame, was just stepping out of it to run on the broad shelf below, when he stopped.
Someone was talking. It was the magic hour, but Little Boy had always been the only one who took advantage of it. He looked about the room—no one was in sight. He must have been mistaken.
But no, there it was again! "I tell you I am the best book to read," said a voice. Little Boy looked at the books in the case that reached around the sides of the room. Yes, it was the books. They were quarreling.
"I have a much handsomer binding than you. I am quite new, so of course I shall be the most popular."
"You can never tell the worth of a book by binding," said an old book.
"I am 'Alice in Wonderland,'" said the voice over as it slid out of the case a little way to be better heard. "I am the book that is best loved. I am sure of that."
"Oh, just hear that old book," said a bright new one leaning far out of the case. "Why, my dear old book, you are old-fashioned as the hills. I have a story that makes people sit up all night to read."
"Yes, and as false as is your imitation leather binding," said a leather-covered book. "You are fiction. Not a word of truth in you. Don't brag."
"I . . . facts, real true things from which people can gain knowledge when they read. I am the most popular book here, I am sure you will all agree."
"Goodness, hear it talk," said a shrill voice and another book leaned out so far it tumbled on the floor.
"Ha, ha," laughed the other book.

The veteran character actor, Theodore Roberts of "movie" fame, was born in San Francisco more than fifty years ago. He began his stage career as soon as he finished the schooling. He was appearing in Broadway productions when he was induced to enter the motion pictures, and he has come to be known as "the grand old man of the movies." Mr. Roberts is six feet one inch tall, weighs 245 pounds. His hair, originally sandy, now is snow white. His eyes are blue.

FLORENCE
FLORENCE, signifying flourishing, can scarcely be separated from its quaint diminutive Flora, meaning flowers. Flora in mythological legend was the goddess of the flowers, and the festivals of Flora or Floralia were celebrated in the first burst of spring. In later times, the name of Florus was formed from that of the goddess, and is memorable as that of the procurator who, by his harshness drove the Jews to their last rebellion. It is believed that the feminine Flora came from this.

A LINE O' CHEER

CHEER UP
EVEN though your place in life is small, Don't let your cheer forsake you. God thought it worth while after you. To make you; And since none can deny you're there. There must be something to you. Could Not Digest the Wire!
The contents taken from the stomach of a large East African crocodile recently shot in Tanganyikan territory include some curious and gruesome relics. Apart from antelope hoofs, tortoise shells and porcupine quills there were a large number of metal hangings such as are worn as bracelets and anklets by native women, beads and a long strand of wire. The strand of wire solved the mystery of the disappearance of a native boy. The lad was in the habit of gathering wood along the river bank and tying up his fagots with a bit of wire. The wire cord found in the crocodile's stomach was only too sure an indication of the fate of the unfortunate boy.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Cuticura Soap Is Ideal for The Complexion

Native Game Birds in Danger.
Our native species of quail, pheasant and wild turkey are fast coming to a point where, if not protected by stringent laws, they will become extinct. It is true that imported birds can be brought in from time to time, but it is also true that there is nothing quite so sweet to the ear of the seasoned gunner as the plaintive "bob-white" call of the quail of Pennsylvania or the one and only "whirr" of the native pheasant as it takes wing.
Ears in Their Feet.
A peculiarity of deaf cats is that they seem to have a very great sense of feeling in their foot-pads. It is almost an impossibility for a heavy animal to approach a deaf cat from behind without giving it warning, and this may be attributed to the extreme sensitiveness of the cat's feet recording the slightest tremor of the ground.

Cuticura Soap for the Complexion.
Nothing better than Cuticura Soap daily and Ointment now and then as needed to make the complexion clear, scalp clean and hands soft and white. Add to this the fascinating, fragrant Cuticura Talcum and you have the Cuticura Toilet Trio.—Adv.

Apples Long Preserved.
