NATIONAL HIGHWAYS
Association Membership No. 2181
Traffic laws which differ in different States are a different source of confusion, accident loss of property, and loss of life. Uniform traffic laws, the same in every State, will promote safety.
The objection urged against uniform traffic laws that traffic conditions are different in different localities, does not hold in the face of the obvious power of locality to modify or add to the uniform law for special conditions. There are many objections which made uniformity would make for safety, such as the system of signaling for a stop, slow up and turn, a uniform rule as to right of way at crossings, safety procedure at grade crossings, a heavy penalty for such dangerous practices as passing another car when coming to a curve or top of a hill, etc.
With forty-eight States and thousands of municipalities, all making their own traffic rules, the motorist is more or less at sea as to what he can and cannot do, should and should not do. But let the National Government take the lead in the National Government, a national traffic law for the nation, a national

SCHOOL NEWS

Friday morning the Freshmen entertained the high school with a very interesting program.
Mr. Welton has placed some of the members on both the boys and girls basketball teams. Friday evening there is a tryout for the boys and the small sum of ten cents will be charged to help meet their expenses.
Everyone is busy this week taking the examinations for the first period.
The beautiful picture presented to the student body by the senior class of '23 is being placed in the assembly. It is a much appreciated addition.
Prof. Bidgood in a talk to the assembly on Monday tried to tell us the value of thinking. He said that a man surrounds himself with his thoughts. If a man's surroundings are not satisfactory all he had to do is to change his thinking and his surroundings will change. We are all above and beyond our minds and we can make the mind obey us.
As a man thinketh in his heart so he is. These are a few of the points he brought out for our consideration.

W.C.T.U. FARM HOME

We are in receipt of a letter from the Children's Farm home with this heading: "Who will present cow number three to the Children's Farm Home?"
They have had two cows presented so far, one by the Orangemen of Oregon City. They presented the home with a $150 cow, and sent a delegation to present Her Ladyship to the Home. Mrs. C. S. Jackson, of the Portland Journal, who is already a heavy donor to the home, presented them with the second cow.
There are some little children there that did not know the taste of milk when they arrived at the home. The complexions of some view with strong coffee, which had been their daily beverages. They are fading out into attractive blands under the use of milk, not only this but their tired, hungry eyes are flashing with vigor and their muscles are hardening and healthy with this necessary children's food. Who wants to send another cow? It will be welcome and receive such care as cows seldom have.

America's Marvels
NATURAL AND OTHERWISE

THE GRASSHOPPER GLACIER

Near the ancient town of Cooke City, Mont., northeast of Yellowstone park, there is an immense glacier or ice field. This glacier is composed of thousands of strata. These strata, or layers of ice, are filled with a species of insect, locally referred to as "grasshopper" for want of a better name, and now extinct.
The scientific explanation of this peculiar phenomena is that, no one knows how long ago, this section of the country was visited by a plague of these insects; that while flying over the mountains of the Bear Tooth range, in what is now known as the Bear Tooth National forest, they were caught in snowstorms, carried down to earth and died. The passage of these swarms of insects continued at intervals year after year. Winter after winter, millions upon millions of these insects were caught in the snowstorms and perished.
This glacier is approximately one mile wide and upwards of half a mile long. Because of the fact that it lies in a rock-rimmed, bowl-shaped space on the shoulder of a mountain, at an elevation of about 11,500 feet above sea level, no one can accurately determine just how thick it is. Its depth may be as great as 1,000 feet.
The layers of ice which make up this glacier are alternately light and dark in color. This, it is thought, is accounted for by the fact that each year the snow which fell during the period after the flights had ceased, being pure, containing no insects, fell, froze and formed a "light" strata, whereas the snow which formed the succeeding strata, fell during one of these insect flights, contained countless numbers of their carcasses and formed a "dark" strata.
Certain it is that there is not a similar spectacle in the known world.

NOT THE PHILOSOPHER'S IDEA

Small Girl Gave Peculiar Twist to Proverb That Some of Us May Remember.
A Philadelphia school teacher was quoting to her pupils the sayings of various wise men touching the value of silence on certain occasions, when she gave them the proverb to the effect that we have one month and two ears, in order that we may listen twice as much as we speak.
A day or so after the instruction, the teacher, to see how well the lesson had been learned, asked a girl pupil the question, as above.
Little Lulu had forgotten the philosopher's maxim; but the question did not seem a difficult one to answer.
"Because," she said, "we should not have room in our face for two months, and we should look too crooked if we had only one ear."
"No, Lulu," said the teacher, "that is not the reason. Perhaps Marie can tell us."
"Yessum," said Marie, "it's that way so we can let what we hear go in at one ear and out at the other!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Great Britain Bars Feathers

No more feathers can enter Great Britain now that the plumage prohibition bill is in force. Women who have feathers in their hats are the envy of their friends and osprey feathers, bird of paradise plumes, and all kinds of fans will shortly be worth their weight in five-pound notes. African ostriches and eider ducks are the only exceptions to the law, as the plumage of both species can be obtained without cruelty while they are molting. The new law does not apply to messengers coming into the country with feathers as part of their personal apparel. Birds of paradise recently have been killed at the rate of 30,000 a year in full breeding plumage, and as many as 300,000 albatrosses were killed in one raid in the Pacific. Florida has been swept clean of "crests, whole colonies of these birds having been butchered at the breeding season to obtain the feathers sometimes known as "ospreys."

Safety First.

Her Husband—I notice they never even hinted it till after I married you.

French Names in London

Their Influence Can Be Found in the British Capital Wherever One May Go.
The French influence in London names is evident wherever one goes. Charing Cross, "which is the modern London's 'center of the world,'" where Kipling says, one may meet the one he seeks if he but wait long enough, is an English corruption of a one-time French name.
When Edward I was bringing the body of his queen from the North, his retinue in their route to Westminster abbey deposited the bier at nightfall where they struck camp. At each resting place a cross was erected. It is recorded.
Throughout England there are now towns, villages and hamlets that bear the name of "cross." One can then almost trace the course of the cortège. The last resting place they reached before they got to Westminster was "Clere Reine Cross" (Dear Queen Cross), now corrupted to "Charing Cross."
"Birdsge Walk," in St. James park, is an interesting example. Popular belief generally is that in medieval days they used to hang bird cages with songbirds in them from the boughs of trees that mark the walk. That is erroneous. "Birdsge Walk" is nothing more than a corruption of the French word "Bouge" (grove). And Birdsge Walk is indeed a pleasant grove, where lovers have been rambling since the Norman conquest.

Plant a Tree.

Every year we cut in the United States wood enough to measure 20,000,000,000 cubic feet of lumber. Each year we cut over 10,000,000 acres of land. At that rate the last of our merchantable lumber will have been exhausted in between 30 and 40 years. Even now we are approaching the forest bankruptcy. We all know the disasters that follow in the path of such a state of affairs. Trees do not mature in a day. The fact that a timber crop is so long in getting here discourages many from doing their share in the work of reforestation. If the land owner will look but a short distance ahead, he will learn that in planting trees he can turn waste land into a source of profit and at the same time he will be performing a duty to his country and the human race.—Exchange.

ANTS OVERRUN LOVELY ISLE

Plata From Argentina Have Completely Wiped Out Bird Life in Madeira—Spread Plant Disease.
L. R. Lefrey, lecturing at the British Royal institute the other day, mentioned that the Argentine ants had spread over half the world since 1897. He gave an example of the mischief wrought by the ant in the fact that it has completely wiped out the birds of Madeira by eating their nestlings. Only those who have lived in a country overrun by ants know the full horror of it.
The housekeeper must reckon, as a necessity of annual expenditure, carbolic acid, petroleum and other protectives against the all-pervading insects.
Every table, every bed, must stand with its legs in little tins of petroleum, or the ants will swarm up.
Others anxiously visit the cradles of their babies to see that no bed-clothes are touching the floor, or a black string of ants will be seen hurrying up the "bridge" at once.
You can never leave any article of food unprotected anywhere in Madeira, or it would be swarming with ants in a few minutes.
The ants have not only introduced into Madeira the acridity, which all the world knows they "milk" like cows, but they have also brought with them the horrible plant diseases of scale and black rust.
These have killed off many orange and coffee trees, and the pomegranate has completely disappeared from the island.
But even this devastating insect has one good quality. The ant is an excellent scavenger.

In the election of directors at the recent school meeting quite a little discussion arose regarding the ballot cast in the election of the short term man.
The vote stood 22 to 23 with one blank ballot cast, which caused considerable discussion as to whether the ballot should be thrown out or counted and thereby make the vote a tie. It was finally ruled to let the ballot stand.
It is not a question of the man elected as much as the election being legal. Now we do not claim to be thoroughly versed in law, but we do claim that the election should have been declared a tie, and a new ballot taken. We believe the law will bear us out in this; if we are not we are ready to be corrected.
