

The DAIRY

DAIRY BULL NEEDS EXTRA GOOD CARE

A little special care should be used in the feeding and general management of the dairy herd sire, in order to maintain his stamina and potency to the fullest degree. In the case of the mature bull this necessitates keeping him in first-class condition as to flesh, but not overweight. Either fatness or thinness in flesh works against the maintenance of his best breeding condition and one is to be avoided as much as the other.

There should be an abundance of roughage in the dairy bull's ration. Clover hay and alfalfa are especially good; he may safely have all of either of these forages that he will consume. Corn stover and oats straw also are good feeds for the bull, though lower in nutritive values than the leguminous hay.

One of the main special requirements of the grain ration is that it be not too abundant; it is better to depend upon the forages for maintaining the animal's weight as much as possible. Many good dairymen give the herd sire the same grain ration as the cows receive, except less of it. The bull's grain needs will vary a great deal according to his size and physical condition, of course, though if he is getting plenty of good hay in addition, especially if it is clover or alfalfa, he will not need more than from four to eight pounds of grain daily. Shorts, bran and oats are particularly good concentrates to use in the grain portion of the bull's ration.

Here is a ration for mature bulls which has the sanction of usage on many farms: Three parts each of cornmeal, ground oats and wheat bran, and one part linseed meal. If desired, hominy may be substituted for the cornmeal.

Whether the herd sire should receive silage is a disputed point among dairymen. Many believe that it impairs the breeding abilities of the bull, though experimental evidence to support this belief is lacking. Other breeders safely feed silage to their herd bulls, though much less of it than the cows receive. Large feedings of silage to bulls results in greatly distending their paunches.

Until he reaches serviceable age there is no better feed for the young bull than grass, and he should be allowed to make as much of his growth on it as possible. On this feed he will build up the right kind of flesh, and along with it will develop vigor and constitution as he would in no other way. Whatever the ration of the young bull, it should contain much protein to supply the needs of his rapidly growing body.

While careful attention needs to be given the bull's ration, proper feeding alone will not maintain the most desirable physical condition. Regular exercise is quite as important in preserving his vigor and potency.

Encouraging Favorable Market for Veal Calves

Here is something dairymen should encourage as a means of making a more favorable market for their veal calves: Meat experts of the federal government say that the practice of shipping veal without removing the hide or skin has many advantages. They explain that veal which does not have the skin removed until it reaches the retailer, which may be from five to ten days or longer after slaughter, still retains its "bloom" and the light pink color most desired by customers. The protective covering supplied by nature keeps the flesh from turning dark. Packers in New York and Chicago are now generally following the practice of selling veal with the skin on. This could be practiced to advantage locally where veal calves are killed for meat on the farm or in small towns.

Kentucky Farmers Make Improvement in Dairies

Since April some 20 purebred dairy sires, ranging from 500-pound records to gold-medal classification, have been brought into Graves county, Kentucky, as a result of the co-operative efforts of the Mayfield chamber of commerce and agricultural extension workers, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. Several carloads of cows with good records have also been purchased by Graves county farmers. Lime-storage sheds, built at shipping points in the county, have enabled farmers to purchase and haul lime at convenient times for the benefit of their legume hay crops, pastures are being improved, and feed crops increased as a part of the county's program for economical and efficient dairy production.

Feed Calf Some Hay

For a young calf mixed hay—clover and timothy or dried bluegrass—is the most desirable, but gradually, as the calf matures, clover hay may be fed with desirable results. Alfalfa hay of the best quality is exceedingly beneficial if limited to small quantities. At most not more than one pound should be fed and the manger should always be cleaned and the uneaten hay removed. Increase the hay ration until it reaches three pounds when the calf is three months of age.

Convicts Pulled Street Cars

Years ago when Australia was the exile to which many English offenders against law and society were sent as convicts, some harsh disciplinary measures were resorted to, among them being the hitching of six men to a street car that traversed six or seven miles. They had to run the entire distance and the drivers lashed them when they began to tire. Six men were supposed to pull a ton of weight in the way of passengers.

DOG ENDS LIFE WHEN NEW BABY USURPS PLACE

Fireman's Pet Leaps to Death From Roof of Flat Building.

New York.—Smoke owned his name by virtue of family right. He was a fireman's dog.

He had been Smoke since nine years ago, when Frederick Ernst held him in one hand and fed him milk from a bottle. His high-born Dalmatian ancestors trotted behind the coaches of the rich or sat beside liveried footmen, but Smoke followed the engines. Even the surrender of horses to gasoline made no difference. After that he rode.

At the first clang of the gong, in the scramble for coats and helmets, above the roar of motors, his yelp of joy would ask permission to go along. The boys at engine company No. 92 recalled this without smiles.

Finally tragedy came to the home at 1255 Grand avenue, the Bronx. His mistress made Mrs. Ernst blind and Smoke's visits to his friends at 92 became less frequent.

The family's need of him became necessary in the four years he guided his mistress from room to room or accompanied her when she ventured on the streets.

Babe Takes His Place.
Then, three months ago, Mrs. Ernst became the mother of a girl baby, and for the first time in his life Smoke found himself in second place.

His old friends in the firehouse began to see more of Smoke than formerly, but there was less enthusiasm in the yelp that greeted the gong.

Ernst found him, head on paws, in front of the engine the other afternoon.

Surgeons Take Glass From Lungs of Boy

St. Louis, Mo.—A cylindrical fragment of a glass bracelet, more than a quarter of an inch thick and a half-inch long, broken off to a point at one end, was removed at Missouri Baptist hospital from the right lung of Vernon Schuler, seven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schuler.

This was the third operation the boy had undergone in two weeks. The shape of the fragment and the depth to which it was imbedded required the making of a special instrument and numerous experiments which sacrificed three dogs.

The boy will remain at the hospital only for treatment to clear up an abscess which formed while the glass remained in his lung.

BEESEIZE FARM AND STOP WORK

Conestoga, Pa.—A swarm of bees played havoc with harvesting operations at the farm of C. K. Paxson, three miles west of here, near Sadsburyville. The other day Paxson and his farmhands started to haul hay.

Two wagons were loaded when a swarm of bees suddenly appeared, about half of the bees alighting on the one load and the other half on the other. Paxson and his helpers gave way before the onslaught and devoted their energies to a neighboring wheat field.

A few nights later Paxson decided to take one load of hay to the barn. In the morning, when he opened the barn, he found the honey-makers had taken possession of that structure and resisted all efforts to make them vacate.

Every man and woman on the place has felt the stings of the bees, and at noon operations on the farm were at a complete standstill while efforts were being made to hive the swarm.

Hurled From the Coping.
and told him to "Run on home to mamma." Smoke started across the path in the his, his tail down.

A few minutes later children playing in the street in front of his house saw Smoke trot into the building and start to climb the stairway to the fourth-floor flat. One story higher was the roof and the trapdoor was open.

The children saw him next when a ball of white hurtled from the coping and fell head-first into the gutter at their feet. Grown persons came and told them he was dead.

Ernst and his fellow firemen lined Smoke in a specially-brought coffin, lined with white. Then Ernst went to his home, packed his furniture and moved his family to the Bronx, where the atmosphere was different.

Boy Resting on Old Mill Wheel Killed as It Turns

Arcola, N. J.—Alden Woody, an eighteen-year-old student at Hackensack high school, sat down on a paddle of the century-old grist mill water wheel near here while waiting for a Mackinac bus. The boy's weight threw the ancient wheel into motion, and as it turned the boy was thrown backward and crushed between the paddle and a supporting timber. He was dead when passersby who heard his screams rescued his body.

The mill was torn down years ago, but the wheel, regarded as a historical landmark, was restored several years ago by the late F. D. Eaton of Arcola, and had been used recently by several motion picture companies as "color" in historical films.
